'Commandante' IS the revolution

UPI reporter Juan Walte was among those who accompanied Sen. Frank Church on a four-day trip to Havana last week, and Cuban leader Fidel Castro put on a fascinating show for the group.

By JUAN J. WALTE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Fidel Castro, a long cigar stuck between his fingers and an AK-47 submachine gun slung over the dashboard of his Russian-made jeep, drove an American guest into the ocean-side "Jose Marti" pioneer youth camp.

As he arrived, hundreds of youngsters emptied the beach in a scene reminiscent of the movie "Jaws."

Shouting — "Fidel, Fidel, be tough on the Yankees," the children nearly ran over the guest — Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho — to get a close look at Castro.

The scene occurred Wednesday at Santa Maria del Mar, along a stretch of beach east of Havana where — according to the official propaganda — the bourgeoisie enjoyed exclusive rights to sun and sand "before the triumph of the revolution."

The scene says little about the "revolution," a term hard to avoid in Cuba. Nor does it reflect on Church's popularity, since the youngsters probably did not even know he was around.

But it says everything about Castro, who turned 51 on Saturday. Called simply Fidel or "Comandante," his guerrilla rank, Castro IS the "revolution" and thus he IS contemporary Cuba.

Castro knows that. He enjoys his role and plays it for all it's worth, especially around foreign visitors. When the visitors are American reporters with their videotape machines, cameras and mini-recorders, his performance is worth an Oscar.

He poses patiently for pictures with everybody. When he senses he is being photographed, he usually turns his right profile toward the camera and either puffs his cigar while holding it to his lips or simply leaves it in his mouth at a 30-degree angle — rather like Franklin D. Roosevelt used to do with his cigarette holder.

But Castro is more than a good actor and an excellent public relations man. He is a through-and-through politician whose appeal perhaps could best be described as "magnetic."

It helps, of course, that he tops six feet, sports a full but greying beard and wears a neatly-pressed olive-green uniform with patent leather zippered combat boots which seem more suitable for his big office in the Palace of the Revolution than on a battlefield.

Castro is both fascinated and obsessed with the United States. American products seem to whet his unending thirst for electronic gadgets and he seems to know all about them.

His obsession shows when the talk turns to political issues, especially the CIA which once reportedly planned — unsuccessfully — to have him murdered.

But what about other Cubans, Cuba itself?

Four days in Havana and a whirl-wing tour of the revolution's showplaces are not an adequate basis for an in-depth appraisal of Castro's successes or failures. They can only produce superficial impressions that very well could be contradicted by what is over the hill the observer did not climb.

For one accustomed to the joie de vivre of most Caribbean people and the hustle and bustle of the region's capital cities, Havana seems drab and run-down. There is a sense of neglect, which one foreigner who lives there believes is deliberate.

Until the early 1970s, this foreigner said, Castro and his fellow revolutionaries wanted to punish Havana because they saw it as the symbol of all they felt was wrong with the city's pre-revolutionary "capitalist decadence."

Even now, people don't laugh much. And when they do, it is with their mouths, not their eyes. The few instances of unrestrained laughter this reporter saw came when Castro waded into crowds, shaking hands, talking shop or paternally scolding someone for not being attentive enough to his guests.

This was mostly during a 13-hour tour of the Cuban country side during which Church and his party saw a housing project; the pioneer camp (Che Guevara had lived there briefly in a house once owned by a "bourgeois" family); cattle and dairy farms (managed quite successfully by Castro's older brother), and a huge citrus plantation.

The trip ended 125 miles southeast of Havana at the Bay of Pigs — site of the abortive 1961 CIA-conducted invasion by some 1,500 Cuban exiles.

There is an irony in all this. It is prankish and yet chilling to watch Castro, standing before maps and pictures depicting the invasion, explain to a member of the U.S. Senate's Foreign Relations Committee how he personally led the counter-offensive.

Castro's voice becomes somber and drops almost to a whisper as he talks about the invasion. This is a serious matter for Castro. But one feels he also senses irony.

Later, Castro took Church on an overnight fishing trip off the Bay of Pigs. Why there, of all places, he was asked.

Again tipping his cigar at an angle as cameras clicked and television crews set their gear in motion, Castro explained with a straight face that it had nothing to do with the invasion.

Vance 'agreement' turns up

© N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON—One day before it was publicly disclosed that Bert Lance was to be nominated to head the Office of Management and Budget, the Atlanta regional director for the Comptroller of the Currency rescinded a potentially embarrassing agreement between the Comptroller and a bank Lance then headed.

This action enabled the Acting Comptroller of the Currency to give Lance a clean bill of health on his management of the Calhoun First National Bank, thereby removing the mismanagement issue as a topic for questioning at Lance's confirmation hearings in January.

The agreement between Lance's bank and the Comptroller's office, in which Lance pledged to correct a number of serious management deficiencies, some of which violated the law, was signed on Dec. 2, 1975. It was prompted by a national bank examiner's routine inspection of the Calhoun bank in the spring of 1975.

According to Deputy Comptroller C. Westbrook Murphy, the examiner discovered on his visit to the bank that Calhoun had permitted Lance to make substantial overdrafts, amounting to $150,000 at one point, some of which were used to finance his unsuccessful 1974 gubernatorial campaign, in apparent violation of federal banking statutes.

He also discovered a series of overdrafts made by LaBelle Lance, Lance's wife. In addition, the examiner found a range of "sloppy banking practices," Murphy said, "the kind of problems often found in small country banks."

Donald Tarleton, the Comptroller's regional administrator in Atlanta, negotiated the agreement for corrective action. The Comptroller's office occasionally requires banks to enter into such agreements when their banking practices warrant closer scrutiny.

In 1976, the Calhoun bank filed periodic written reports on its progress in correcting its problems and was visited monthly by bank examiners. The last visit, Murphy said, was in October. At that time, the bank requested the cancellation of its agreement, contending that it had corrected its deficiencies.

According to Murphy's account, Tarleton decided on Nov. 22, 1976, three weeks after Jimmy Carter was elected President, to rescind the agreement. At that time Lance's appointment had been the subject of speculation in Atlanta, and the next day it appeared in the national news media.

When asked whether Tarleton had authority to rescind the agreement, Murphy responded: "Well, he thought he did. He was given authority to negotiate it and modify the terms, so he assumed he had the authority to rescind."

However, Robert Bloom, the Acting Comptroller at the time the decision was made, apparently disagreed. On Nov. 24, 1976, Bloom issued a directive specifying that such agreements were not to be rescinded without the chief Comptroller's approval.

Tarleton, who still presides over the regional office in Atlanta, said in a telephone interview that he was prohibited by law from discussing the matter.

Murphy acknowledged that the Comptroller's office did not show a copy of the agreement to the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee in its consideration of the Lance nomination. Nor did the Comptroller alert the senators to the existence of such an agreement. When asked why not, Murphy replied, "Because they didn't ask for it."

In his letter to the committee, Bloom praised Lance as a man who "enjoys a very good reputation in the banking community" and was "well qualified to serve" as budget director.

Lance's activities at the Calhoun bank are among the topics now under study by Comptroller John Heimann. According to an inquiry into the operations of the Calhoun bank by a team of New York Times reporters, the following facts, some of them previously reported, have become relevant to that inquiry:

—A criminal investigation involving Lance's activities at the Calhoun bank was terminated only two days before Lance's designation as budget director.

—Lance was the immediate supervisor of a vice president at the Calhoun bank who embezzled nearly a million dollars over four years by issuing bogus loans. Lance has acknowledged in court documents filed in a civil suit that he knew that the vice president, Bill L. Campbell, was having personal financial difficulties.

—Lance was warned in 1971 that Campbell's loan decisions appeared to be irregular, but no effort was made to discipline or remove Campbell until July 31, 1975, court records showed. Campbell was convicted of embezzlement in 1975 and is serving an eight-year prison sentence.

Kress gets feet wet, may challenge Hansen

By DAVID MORRISSEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Democrat Stan Kress has begun the first of 100 fund-raising events he will hold in 1977 and this week will form a congressional campaign committee for the 1978 election, the Times-News has learned.

The 33-year-old Firth School Superintendent was the Democratic nominee for the Second District Congressional post in 1976, losing that race to incumbent Republican Congressman George Hansen.

Friday evening Kress held the first of his fund raisers in Twin Falls, gathering with area Democrats at the home of newly elected Democratic County Chairman Marjorie Slotten.

The 30 persons present talked with Kress, his wife Carolyn and former Kress Campaign Manager Angie Neitzel, of Boise.

"A small amount of funds were raised," Kress said after the gathering.

"We will file reports with the Idaho Secretary of State and the Federal Election Commission next week," Kress told the Times-News. "We had made the last reports of the 1976 Kress for Congress Committee in April. Under the law you must open a committee and file reports within 30 days of raising $1,000. We haven't raised anywhere near that yet," Kress said.

Kress said the Twin Falls meeting was the first of approximately 100 such meetings and fund raisers he will hold before the first of the year — when he will make a final decision on running for Congress.

"We are giving serious consideration to running for the United States Congress although no formal committment has yet been made," Kress said. "The indications are very strong we will be running, though I'm waiting until I've talked with all of my former area chairman and supporters before making the final decision."

Kress spent Saturday in Burley, meeting with supporters from his 1976 Congressional bid. That year he lost the general election to Rep. Hansen by 1,938 votes out of a total of 166,412 votes cast, or about one per cent.

Magic Valley busy building

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

MAGIC VALLEY — Hammers are pounding the loudest in Twin Falls, Gooding, Blaine and Minidoka counties this summer where the number of new homes and businesses under construction is much higher than last year.

But a Times-News survey of construction activity in Magic Valley found no housing boom in Cassia or Jerome counties.

Hotel construction has slowed down somewhat in Sun Valley, the survey found, but residential construction, including condominums, still is going strong in Idaho's famous resort.

Residential construction is alive and well in Magic Valley this summer because of a generally looser money market, according to valley constructors.

Lending institutions are giving more money for new housing than they have in years past, but Twin Falls County building inspector Ed Woods says there are still "thousands of people who want a house but can't aquire a loan."

In Twin Falls County, building permits on record in the county zoning office show a significantly higher number of commercial buildings being built in Magic Valley's most populated county.

Twin Falls County building permits leaped from 154 during the first half of 1976 to 214 for the first six months of this year.

Permits for single family residences in the county jumped to 123 from only 73 during the same period last year.

Commercial construction within county boundaries also is slightly up, Twin Falls county has sold 12 commercial permits so far this year compared to eight in the first six months of last year.

Ed Wood, Twin Falls County building inspector, says most of the people taking out county building permits are local residents.

"I'd say there has been probably a 50 per cent increase in the amount of building in the county," Wood says. "It seems to be a national surge. We don't know what to attribute it to."

Twin Falls contractor Bob Wills says his residential construction operation got a head start on last year due to the open winter in the area.

"We'll build about 20 per cent more homes this year," Wills says. "I think it's busier than it was a year ago."

Commercial construction has jumped nearly double compared to the same period last year. Through July, 1976, the city of Twin Falls sold 14 building permits for new commercial construction. So far this year the city has sold 27 permits.

Total value of construction in the city is up, too, according to Darrell Howard, city building inspector.

"For last year, the total value of commercial construction was right at $10 million in the city," Howard recalls. "Already for the first six months of this year, it's about $9 million."

Total value of construction in the city through July is $9.3 million compared to only $7.2 million for the same period last year.

Residential construction in the city of Ketchum is booming this year, due to a moratorium in construction which does not allow construction of multiple unit housing.

TO START A NEW HOUSE PROJECT WORKERS MUST FIRST 'DIG IN'
... new house construction is growing in Magic Valley and booming across the country

Music of hammers, saws sounds in Magic Valley

"This is the biggest year we've seen so far in single family dwellings," Wes Nash, Ketchum building inspector says. "Right now everybody seems to be busy."

He says in 1976, only 39 permits for both singles and duplexes were issued through July while already this year 62 units have been approved for construction.

"This is definitely a big construction year," Nash says. "It's kind of surprised us. It's almost double last year."

He says commercial construction is also up in the city. So far this year permits for about seven commercial projects have been granted compared to only four last year.

The commercial projects include mostly conversions and remodels of old homes into restaurants or shops. New commercial construction has been slow so far this year.

County building permits sold in Hailey are also up over last year at 102 compared to only 88 for the same period of 1976. Permits sold are all for residential construction or remodeling.

In the city of Hailey, 13 permits have been sold for residential construction compared to only 11 last year. The city sold only 23 for all of 1976.

Sun Valley, Ketchum's tiny neighbor to the east, is also experiencing a surge in residential construction, most of it in the new Elkhorn Village.

"Construction of single family dwellings is way over last year," Oliver Dibble, Sun Valley building inspector says. "They're all single family with the exception of one condominium project."

After the $3 million hotel built last year in Sun Valley, commercial construction has been rather lackluster this year, he says.

"You don't look to see very much commercial construction," Dibble adds.

He says the city has sold 12 permits so far this year for projects valued at $1.4 million while it sold only nine permits in the same period of 1976 for a total of $1.7 million.

The city of Rupert and Minidoka County are also enjoying a boom in both residential and commercial new construction this year, according to county building inspector Bill McClung.

"If we talk valuation, we're $1.4 million over last year in the first six months," McClung says. "The commercial construction impresses me more than the houses because people have to have jobs."

He says the county has 12 more permits for commercial new construction than for the same period last year and 17 more residential permits have been sold over last year's first six months.

He says contractors are busy and there has recently been a shortage of dry wall contractors to do the needed wall board and texture installation.

He says it "still looks good" for commercial construction. He has applications for permits to build "several" more industrial and commercial buildings.

Neither the city of Burley or Cassia County appears to be experiencing a boom in new construction.

Cassia County has issued 22 permits for new homes and one permit for new offices. The city of Burley has issued 18 permits for residences so far this year.

Residential construction in the city of Jerome is down from last year, but total building permits are running about the same.

Permits were issued for 172 residences last year in Jerome compared to only 37 for the first half of 1977. Total permits hit 156 so far this year while 246 were sold for the entire year in 1976.

Colorado plutonium workers died mainly from cancer

The Calhoun bank permitted its officers, as well as Lance and his wife, to make overdrafts of their accounts. Campbell at one point had $190,000 in overdrafts. The National Bank of Georgia, which Lance also headed, gave Campbell loans that he used to pay his overdrafts.

Lance used a Piper Cub aircraft belonging to the Calhoun bank for political trips in 1974, V.A. Henderson, the president of the bank, said the bank had receipts showing that Lance paid for the flights.

The Comptroller, Lance confirmed in a recent interview with The Los Angeles Times, is also examining his use of an aircraft belonging to the National Bank of Georgia.

On Dec. 24, 1975, the Comptroller's office referred evidence about Lance's personal overdrafts to the Department of Justice for possible prosecution.

Murphy said that the Comptroller's office had told the Justice Department that, while the overdrafts used to finance Lance's 1974 campaign constituted an apparent "technical violation of criminal statutes," there were "mitigating circumstances."

These included a guarantee Lance previously signed promising to pay off all the overdrafts, which he eventually did.

"We did not think that the Justice Department would prosecute this case in view of the mitigating circumstances," Murphy said. "Justice decides not to act on lots of our referrals."

Justice Department officials were also skeptical. "From a banking standpoint some of the incidents were outrageous," one federal official said privately, "but there was no clear illegality."

Nevertheless, the case was assigned in January, 1976, to Jeffrey Bogart, the Assistant United States Attorney in Atlanta who had prosecuted Campbell.

Bogart, one Justice Department source said, was instructed that he could not call for a federal indictment unless he could find legal precedent for such a prosecution. Bogart has lately declined to comment on the case, but once told newsmen the Calhoun bank was "run like a piggy bank."

Despite the skepticism about its prosecutorial merit, the case languished for 11 months in the United States Attorney's office in Atlanta. Then, on Dec. 1, 1976, two days before the announcement of Lance's nomination as budget director, United States Attorney John Stokes Jr. ordered the prosecution terminated. In recent days he has declined to return telephone calls from The New York Times.

A Justice Department official said privately that his concern about Stoke's decision was not the action, but the timing. If the case had no merit, he said, it should have been dispatched much earlier and not on the eve of Lance's confirmation.

Lance's 'clean slate' timed?

GOLDEN, Colo. (UPI) — An autopsy study of 49 plutonium workers reveals cancer was the primary cause of death for more than one-third, including 13 who worked at the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant.

Federal researchers conducting the study admit it is "heavily biased" toward cancer, with suspected cases intentionally included in the study.

The study was heavily weighted with information about deceased Rocky Flats employes who were exposed to radioactive plutonium at the plant northwest of Denver, said Dr. Bryce D. Breitenstein Jr., who headed the study.

Those employes account for nearly 70 per cent of the 49 autopsies that have been completed or partially completed in the study conducted by the U.S. Transuranium Registry.

Autopsy tissues of the plutonium workers are being analyzed in laboratories at Rocky Flats and four other facilities, all operated under the direction of the U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration.

Breitenstein said because it is heavily biased toward cancer and includes only a fraction of the nation's 20,000 plutonium workers, no conclusions can yet be drawn as to plutonium's possible role in cancer deaths.

"There is no strong evidence of any excess of cancer among plutonium workers," he said. "But we've not really looked hard enough."

Such a searching look at plutonium workers is being conducted in another federal study at the Los Alamos, N.M. Scientific Laboratory, he said.

Breitenstein said the study to date has found 13 cancer deaths among 11 employes at Rocky Flats, three cancer deaths among 11 employes at the Hanford Plant in Richland, Wash., and the cancer death of one employe of Mound Laboratories, Miamisburg, Ohio.

No cancer deaths were found in autopsy studies of two former employes of the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory and one former employe of the Oak Ridge, Tenn., National Laboratory.

Among the 13 Rocky Flats employes who died of cancer, Breitenstein said, two died of leukemia, two of brain cancer, two of lung cancer, and one each of cancer of the bladder, abdomen, kidney, skin, colon, esophagus and prostate gland.

Lung cancer was the cause of death of the three Hanford employes, and cancer "originating at an undetermined site" killed the former Mound Laboratories employe, said Breitenstein.

The researcher said previous laboratory studies showed plutonium caused bone and lung cancer in animals.

Breitenstein said the autopsy study is seeking to determine where plutonium is deposited in the body of plutonium workers, and to compare the amount of plutonium estimated to have been deposited in living plutonium workers with the amount of plutonium found at autopsy.

West takes 'terminal vacation'

By KEN HODGE
Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho Wheat Commission administrator Harold West will reportedly take three weeks' "terminal vacation" with pay beginning Sept. 1 as his part of a "gentlemen's agreement concerning his dismissal as administrator of the commission.

In addition, Tom Pearse, public relations consultant for the commission and publisher of the grower news-organ, Wheat Grower News, was fired Friday by the commission at the same decisive meeting.

West's ouster came after two controversial 3-2 votes by the commission and appointment of a new commissioner whose vote did not change the commission's policy toward him.

Pearse, given his walking papers as of 5 p.m. Friday, said he expected the action.

He was reportedly fired for including pro-West material in the July issue of Wheat Grower News (WGN).

"I knew they wouldn't like it," Pedrse said about the recent publication. "They tried to stop me from publishing it. They were aware that I was printing something they would regard as controversial."

Earl Hoopes, commissioner from Rexburg, reportedly held up the July issue of WGN at the Friday meeting of the commission calling it "disgraceful" and not in the best interest of the growers.

The magazine is supported 100 per cent by the commission which contributes 40 cents a copy, or about $4,400 for the 11,000 issues sent to subscribers.

Pearse says he has not yet lost his job as publisher of the magazine, but the commission says it plans to review its contract with the publication.

Pearse says he will confer later with Idaho State Wheat Growers Association President Robert Geddes, Preston, as to what he will do next. He says he assumes he will continue to publish the magazine.

Pearse included a copy of a newspaper editorial which asked the commission to rationalize West's ouster and an article by State Rep. Harold Reid supporting West in the controversial issue.

"I had to sit down and decide who I was responsible to," Pearse says. "I decided I have a responsibility to the readers. They should know what is going on."

"The commission believes they should have some say in the content of the magazine because they fund it," Pearse says. "They are given the two center pages for their use to explain their programs to the wheat growers."

Pearse says he also wrote the pages set aside for the commission.

"In our opinion those pages are what the commission gets in return for their funding," he adds.

The issue came out during the midst of a controversy over West's ouster.

West had been asked to resign by the commission, although a vote among the board of directors of the ISWGA for reappointment of an outgoing commissioner unseated one of the commissioners who voted against West.

Other wheat growers nominated for the position were expected to tip the balance in the commission back to three to two in favor of West.

John Burton, Clear Lakes, however, appointed by Gov. John Evans, also voted against West in the second ouster vote in July.

At the August meeting last Friday, the "gentlemen's agreement" was officially reached and West was told his last day on the job would be Aug. 31.

Pearse's July publication gave a blow-by-blow account of the ouster move and included pro-West sentiment which some commission members resented.

Senator visits seniors Monday

TWIN FALLS — Senator Frank Church will be a special guest at the noon luncheon of the Twin Falls Senior Citizens at the new Senior Center Aug. 29.

Officials at the center announce it will now be open from two to five p.m. each Sunday in addition to its regular hours Monday through Friday.

No meals will be served on Sunday, but seniors are urged to participate in activities, including special entertainment.

The center will hold Bingo Night each Monday night except Aug. 15 at 7:30 p.m.

Pinochle night is scheduled for each Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

The Activity planning Committee will meet every third Friday of each month at 1:30 and is open to the participation of all seniors.

Meals will be served each weekday at noon at the center and will be delivered to homes of seniors who cannot come to the center. A donation of one dollar is requested.

The Dial-A-Ride bus service will operate Monday, Wednesday and Friday to transport seniors for medical appointments, shopping, visits and other errands. Seniors wishing to use the transportation are requested to call on the day their excursion. The center suggests a donation of 50 cents per ride. The center also provides transportation for all center events.

The meal at the center scheduled for Aug. 24 has been cancelled since the Twin Falls seniors have been invited to a picnic with the Camas County Senior Citizens at Soldier Mountain. Those who wish to attend should call the center at 743-5084 to make reservations.

On Aug. 27, the Twin Falls group will go to the Kimberly center for a potluck dinner from 6 to 9 p.m. Reservations should be made by Aug. 26. Transportation will be provided.

Vance plans China trip, friendly welcome likely

By KEYES BEECH
© Chicago Daily News

WASHINGTON — Sec. of State Cyrus Vance will go to Peking this month ready to discuss a wide range of subjects including the sale of military technology to the Chinese and the purchase of American wheat by the Chinese.

Vance, who is due back in Washington this weekend after another unrewarding peace-seeking expedition to the Middle East, is scheduled to begin his five-day mission to Peking Aug. 20. It will be the Carter administration's first high-level contact with the newly formed Chinese leadership.

Administration sources were careful to emphasize that any talks on the sale of U.S. technology to the Chinese would center on equipment designed primarily for peacetime rather than military use.

"No one is talking about a military aid program for the People's Republic," said one administration source. "What we are talking about are such things as computers, radar, communications equipment and airplane engines — not weapons systems."

Whether the Russians, who view the Washington-Peking relationship with fear and suspicion, will appreciate this fine distinction is another matter. Any technology that China acquires from the west strengthens its military capability, as the Russians are well aware.

The question whether the United States should sell China military technology has been the subject of heated debate among administration insiders.

A recent policy review concluded that such a move would lead to a "fundamental reassessment" of Soviet attitudes toward detente with the United States, have an adverse impact on strategic arms limitation talks, and increase tensions between Moscow and Peking.

However, the matter did not end there. One source said the sale of military technology to China had been revived, primarily at the urging of national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, who was said to have regarded it as "an immediate policy question" in view of Vance's forthcoming visit to China.

Up to now Chinese military purchases have been from European sources. Last year, with tacit U.S. approval, Britain's Rolls-Royce sold China 50 Spey engines along with the right to manufacture them.

Vance, Begin deal with 'crisis'

By JAMES RESTON
© N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The big news here a couple of weeks ago was that President Carter and Prime Minister Begin of Israel had got along like old buddies. And now the latest news is that Secretary of State Vance and the same Begin are said to be facing some kind of "crisis" in the U.S.-Israeli relations.

So what has happened? Nothing! Carter dealt with the manners of the Begin visit in Washington and left it to Vance to deal with the facts in Tel-Aviv. The President was determined to avoid a confrontation with Begin on policy, so their meeting encouraged exaggerated hopes which are now leading to excessive fears.

Actually, very little has changed, but Begin has at least clarified the problem. He is one of those rare prickly birds like de Gaulle, who really means what others have merely said, and after his amiable reception in Washington, he obviously isn't very sure about what Washington is either saying or meaning.

Nobody around here is very clear either. Jimmy Carter receives visitors from abroad the way he'd greet strangers who dropped into Plains, Ga., from Milwaukee. It's not a pose. At first meeting, he wants them to feel at home, but sometimes they go away confusing his manners with his purpose.

There is something very amiable but also a little confusing about the Carter administration's diplomacy. It is in a great hurry. It HAD to deal with Panama, and has dealt with it very well so far, but it wants to "normalize relations" with Cuba and China, and fix things up with Rhodesia and South Africa, and get Israel to "shape up" before any of them is ready.

Vance's trip to the Middle East and his forthcoming mission to China later this month illustrate the problem. He is not ready to settle the issues in either place. They will like him, but not agree with him and Begin in Israel is determined to resist the Carter administration's proposed compromises.

Begin is not going to negotiate with the Palestine Liberation Organization; under any circumstances. Even if they repudiated their written compact to destroy the state of Israel and accepted the permanence of the Israeli state under U.N. Resolution 242 with safe boundaries, he wouldn't believe them.

Also, Begin has made clear that he will not make the concessions the U.S. and the U.N. want him to make: to withdraw from the Golan Heights and the West Bank, and he rejects out of hand Carter's suggestions about the establishment of a Palestinian "state" or "homeland" or "entity" on what he regards as "liberated" Israeli territory.

So there is obviously a stalemate, but not, in the foreseeable future, a crisis of war. The Israelis have the courage of their convictions, and will fight even a preventive war if necessary, but the Arab states probably won't risk it. The question, or so it seems here, is how the United States can use its influence and power to bring about a compromise by something more than pleasant meetings or public visits.

At some point, the United States will probably have to decide (1) to guarantee by treaty the pre-1967 boundaries of Israel, with minor strategic amendments, or (2) make clear to Israel that it will not continue to finance and arm a Begin policy it thinks will lead to war, or (3) evade any decision and take its chances.

The tendency in Washington now is to evade any clear treaty guarantees of Israel's pre-1967 borders — to be pleasant to Begin and talk vaguely about "going to Geneva" with the Palestinians somewhere in the wings, but this isn't convincing the Israelis, the Arabs or the PLO.

So for the present, everybody is left in a state of doubt. As things stand now, the United States is backing a government in Israel with whose policies it disagrees, and leaving Israel without the guarantees Israel needs. Begin has made this dilemma clear, but the odd thing is that, like Rabin and Golda Meir before him, he has shown little interest in an American security treaty, which is probably the only thing that will break the deadlock.

Without such a guarantee, the philosophic and historic argument between Israel and the Arab states can go on for years, with the probability in the end of another war with more devastating weapons on both sides.

Accordingly, this dilemma calls for something more than Jimmy Carter's kindly manners and Cy Vance's patient travels around the Middle Eastern capitals. It needs a decision by the United States, clear to all sides, that if Israel withdraws to the pre-1967 borders, or thereabouts, the United States will defend those borders against any aggressor, including the Soviet Union.

Sawin off to good start in new job

New Twin Falls school superintendent James Sawin generated happy sighs of relief in the district 411 offices a few days ago.

Sawin deftly steered the Twin Falls school board and local teachers through treacherous contract negotiations for 1977-78.

Only a year ago, Twin Falls teachers stalked out of their classrooms in a district-wide teachers strike.

Last year's strike was largely a protest of the manner in which contract negotiations were conducted. Teacher mistrust of the school board and the superintendent significantly worsened problems at the negotiations table.

Twin Falls teachers have periodically complained about the inability of local school superintendents to master the delicate balancing act of keeping teachers and school boards from ripping each other apart.

In a state where teacher salaries are low and unions are just getting started it's no wonder more superintendents than ever are leaving their posts for other lines of work.

But in Twin Falls, Jim Sawin is off to a good start.

He's got both teachers and school board members speaking highly of him. That's quite an achievement.

Last week, less than a day after he entered the contract negotiations, Sawin ironed out an agreement both sides could accept.

In the negotiation room, he seemed able to lessen the tension between the teachers and the school board.

A year ago, Twin Falls teachers were talking strike.

A few weeks before the 1977-78 school term opens, Jim Sawin has teacher signatures on new contracts without a hitch.

The change in attitudes this year as compared to last year should draw cheers from Twin Falls parents, students and taxpayers.

Should US give illegal aliens amnesty?

By MARJORIE HUNTER
© N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Should illegal aliens be granted amnesty by the United States?

This is a question that will be debated in the months or years ahead as Congress considers President Carter's proposal.

Acting on the advice of a Cabinet-level panel, the President has recommended that full amnesty be granted to aliens who have been living in this country for at least seven years.

Under this plan, aliens who have been here for that length of time or longer would be given permanent resident status and would be permitted to bring their families to this country.

The plan would also allow illegal aliens who have been here less than seven years but who were in this country before last Jan. 1 to remain and continue working. However, they would be denied most social services and would not be permitted to bring in their families.

Following are some of the questions central to the debate:

Q. How many illegal aliens are in the United States?

A. No one knows for sure. The Immigration and Naturalization Service had set the number at four million to 12 million, but more recently narrowed the estimate to six million to eight million.

Q. Is the number of illegal aliens entering the United States increasing?

A. Yes. I.N.S. officials estimate that at least half a million more illegal aliens enter this country every year by slipping across the borders, by using forged documents, or by entering on visitor or student visas and then simply not returning home.

Q. Is no effort being made to curtail the flow of illegal aliens?

A. About 900,000 illegal aliens were apprehended last year by the I.N.S. and sent home, either voluntarily or under deportation proceedings. However, it is generally agreed that the INS has too few people and inadequate equipment to stem the flow.

Q. Who are the illegal aliens?

A. Most illegal aliens in the United States come from 15 countries — Mexico, the Dominican Republic, Haiti, Jamaica, Guatemala, Columbia, Peru, Ecuador, the Phillippines, Korea, Thailand, Greece, India, Iran and Nigeria — according to a 1976 report of a Ford Administration Domestic Council Committee on Illegal Aliens. INS officials say that by far the largest number, perhaps three-fourths of illegal aliens, are from Mexico.

Q. Are most illegal aliens now in the United States permanent or temporary residents?

A. Some studies, including one by Wayne A. Cornelius, associate professor of political science at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, showed that a vast majority of illegal aliens from Mexico come to the United States for only four to six months a year to do seasonal work, then return home for the rest of the year. INS officials believe that illegal aliens from other countries, however, live in this country permanently, many of them settling in New York City and other large metropolitan areas.

Q. How many illegal aliens in the United States hold jobs?

A. INS officials have estimated that more than 3.6 million illegal aliens were employed in this country in 1976.

Q. How many illegal aliens hold jobs that unemployed Americans might otherwise have?

A. There is wide disagreement on this. Some believe that the displacement of American workers is extensive; others say it is minimal. Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall says: "We just don't know, and the answer to that question is critical to our economic interest. If illegal aliens are indeed taking jobs that people in the United States refuse to fill, then they tend to promote our economic growth. If the aliens have jobs Americans would otherwise fill, then aliens do contribute to our unemployment."

Q. Has the availability of illegal aliens had an adverse effect on wages and working conditions in the United States?

A. Secretary of Labor Marshall and General Leonard F. Chapman Jr., former commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, both say "Yes." In their view, many illegal aliens take jobs that pay less than the minimum wage and are exploited in other ways by their employers. An even more critical problem, Marshall says, is the development of an under-class of people, the exploited illegal aliens, who could become this nation's "civil rights problem of the 1980s." While the illegal aliens themselves might suffer exploitation, he says, their children could become agitators for better living conditions unless something is done.

Q. Is it against the law for a United States employer to hire an illegal alien?

A. No. The House of Representatives has twice passed a bill to impose civil and criminal penalties on employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens, but the Senate has taken no action. President Carter's task force has recommended imposition of civil but not criminal penalties. Rep. Joshua Eilberg, a Pennsylvania Democrat who heads the House Judiciary subcommittee on immigration, contends that civil penalties alone would not deter employers from hiring illegal aliens. "A civil fine," he says, "would become merely the cost of doing business for many employers."

Q. Couldn't the hiring of illegal aliens be curtailed by issuing counterfeit-proof Social Security cards to United States citizens and legal aliens?

A. Many persons familiar with the problem say this would be the best long-range solution. Labor Secretary Marshall favors this approach but concedes it would be too costly at this point. It might be necessary to move gradually toward this kind of system, he says. Sources on Capitol Hill say issuance of such cards would cost about a half-billion dollars and would take years. Some, such as Rep. Eilberg, have reservations about what might be viewed as "an internal passport" and its "police state" implications. The task force proposal sent to Carter rejected the idea of new Social Security cards.

Q. Instead of granting amnesty to many of the illegal aliens, should the United States attempt to cope with the problem through mass deportation?

A. Virtually no one familiar with the problem has suggested mass deportation. The 1976 Domestic Council Report concluded that "massive deportation of illegal aliens is both inhumane and impractical." Atty. Gen. Griffin B. Bell, a member of President Carter's task force on immigration, has said that "many illegal aliens have built equities in our country by virtue of their long residence and their contributions here." INS officials say it would be impossible to round-up the vast majority of illegal aliens because they have become "part of our society." Furthermore, past efforts at mass deportation, such as "Operation Wetback" in 1953-54, were criticized by church groups, civil libertarians, Hispanic leaders and certain segments of the business community, and worsened United States relations with Mexico.

War criminals need tracking

The Immigration and Naturalization Service is finally doing something it should have done 30 years ago. It is setting up a unit to hunt for war criminals who fled to the United States after World War II.

Because of cold war antagonisms, there had been a reluctance in this country to comply with the demands of the Soviet Union and other Communist states for the extradition of war criminals.

The immigration service's efforts to track war crimes suspects and institute deportation proceedings against them were fragmented, inefficient and casual.

The unit, according to INS Commissioner Leonel Castillo, will have top Justice Department backing in acquiring confidential information from the Defense and State Departments and the Central Intelligence Agency.

Castillo indicated that the sloppy recordkeeping of the half-hearted investigations of the past will no longer be tolerated.

The reforms should go a long way to speed action against the 110 persons identified as war crimes suspects.

Deportations are now in progress against four of them, including Andrija Artukovic, 76, of Seal Beach, who is wanted in Yugoslavia to answer for his role as a Nazi puppet implicated in the deaths of 770,000 persons during World War II.

Effective operation of the new war-crimes units — and the deportation of Artukovic — should go a long way to allay suspicions that the United States continues to be remiss in bringing war criminals to justice.

But who wants to eat crow?

October 1st will come and go and not many people will remember that's the day crow season opens in Idaho.

That's right, the Idaho Department of Fish & Game has authorized the first-ever crow hunting season, beginning October 1 and ending January 31, 1978.

Hunters with rifles, bow and arrow or falcons can bag an unlimited number of crows this fall and early winter.

But the season won't become a very popular one. As Gov. Evans, or any newspaper editorialist knows, nobody likes to eat crow so why will anybody want to hunt 'em?

Minimum wage proposal helps, hinders

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

An oxymoron, as any student of rhetoric might advise you, is an epigrammatic device that relies upon contradictory words. The dictionary's first example is "cruel kindness." For a still better example, consider the pending proposal for an increase in the federal minimum wage.

The intention of the sponsors is altogether benevolent. The government wants to be kind. An estimated 3.7 million workers now earn only the fixed minimum wage of $2.30. That hourly rate has prevailed for the past 18 months; meanwhile the cost of living has continued to climb. Fairness, justice and decency cry out for an increase. Let us lift up the downtrodden! Assure them a living wage!

These are moving appeals. The AFL-CIO, which is the most deeply moved, would hike the minimum at once to $3. Congressman John H. Dent of Pennsylvania, not quite so moved, would go to $2.85. President Carter, moved a bit less, would try $2.50. Various efforts are proposed to tie the minimum wage hereafter to the average of all manufacturing earnings; a 60 per cent index would require a minimum 18 months hence of about $3.30.

For the man or woman now earning $2.30, surely this offers a happy prospect — an increase of 43 per cent in a year and a half. Bless the AFL-CIO, and bless Mr. Dent, and bless our dear President! But while the blessings are invoked, remember the oxymoron. What is proposed is a cruel kindness, a gentle harshness, a lovable little klek in the pants.

The 3.7 million workers now earning $2.30 an hour — the human beings who are the direct and immediate objects of this solicitude — work at the outer rim of the industrial carousel. They are the first ones to be spun off. These are predominantly the old, the very young, the least skilled, the least productive. We are talking of women employed as maids, of students in odd jobs, of teenaged blacks trying desperately to help in family support.

What will all this kindness mean to them? An increase in the minimum wage of not more than 8 to 10 per cent probably would result in immediate and nearly universal benefits for them. Most covered employers, we may assume, could adjust to $2.50 instead of $2.30. But for the most marginal workers — for those whose jobs already hang by a doubtful thread — even a 20-cent boost could prove fatal salvation. At still higher levels, as many economic studies have shown in the past, we could expect even more bitter sweetness.

"Among teenaged blacks, unemployment already stands at 39.1 per cent. What would a substantial increase in the minimum wage mean for them? Dr. Walter E. Williams, associate professor of economics at Temple University, laid a harsh answer on the line in testimony before the Senate Labor Committee last week. Over the past 30 years, the relative position of blacks in the labor force (and especially of young blacks) has steadily declined. It is still falling. Why is this? The answer, said Williams, "is the minimum wage law."

A letter is at hand from William F. Kartozian of Walnut Creek, California. He and his partners operate 29 movie theaters in Northern California. They have 209 employees, of whom roughly 150 are young persons 16 to 21. Most of them are students who work to help pay for their education. They are now paid a little more than the minimum wage.

Kartozian understands clearly what the callous solicitude of Congress will mean to his young people. At $2.15 an hour, his entire pre-tax profit would be wiped out. Therefore, if he is not to price his movie tickets beyond what the traffic will bear, some of his employees must be fired, and some must be put on reduced work weeks. Some will be replaced by automated equipment. And some, of course, will be kept on the payroll at whatever the new minimum might be. The most productive workers stay afloat; the least productive sink back to the welfare rolls.

Members of Congress mean well. They mean to fine-tune our economic life. But the delicate clumsiness exhibited in their minimum wage proposals will provoke questions from workers out on the fringe: Who are these friendly enemies who would assist us out of a job?

Editorial called 'subjective'

Editor, Times-News:

The editorial page of newspapers throughout this country and other truly democratic countries in the world today represents one of the greatest achievements of man for it allows anyone, no matter how low their ranking on the social-economic ladder, to express their feelings regardless of how unpopular they might be.

There are exceptions to this freedom, of course, as well there should be when unfounded libel or defamation of personal character are the end result. It is a curious phonomenon, however, when individuals will take it upon themselves to utilize this very freedom to call for restrictions on someone else's liberty.

Of course, I am referring to the quite narrow-minded attitude expressed by (Ms.) Louise Meyer in the August 8th edition of the Times-News. Her attack was primarily upon the "pornographers" of the world who threaten "the children," but she does not stop there. Like most religious fanatics who find their own lifelong values shaken because not everyone agrees with them, Ms. Meyer goes on to criticize much of the new rock music because it just might get people, again especially the young, to think of that horrendous act against God and country — SEX!!. She even goes on to condemn a movie, which I doubt she has ever seen, that chooses to offer another explanation for the background to the Christ story.

What Ms. Meyer does is condemn all aspects of pornography, overtly sexual music, and "blasphemous" literature with her examples because they run contrary to her beliefs; or could it be that deep down it makes her question her own beliefs — one must decide that for oneself. In any event, she is most definitely entitled to her convictions, and I would certainly not wish to change them.

What I do find repulsive however, is her desire to force everyone to think only her way by restricting the publishing and/or editorial rights of someone else because she personally finds their views offensive.

Could we not, on the same grounds, call for the television networks to restrict the programming of Billy Graham, Oral Roberts, the LDS Conference as well as all other religiously oriented programs because several atheists find them offensive?

Ms. Meyer takes it upon herself to say that a free society is a discriminating one but that only the "good" discrimination is valid. If she is to define "good" for all of us and seek to restrict our exposure to certain material because of her own moral values, then she cannot talk legitimately about freedom without running into a gross contradiction in terms.

In closing, let me just say that throughout history we have had evidence of many "truths" but only these remain today that could stand side-by-side with their antithesis without failing. These other "truths", such as these of Adolph Hitler and other freedom-repressing societies, which choose to squelch all contrary thought did not survive very long themselves. Let us strive for freedom for everyone or reconcile ourselves to freedom for no one because without our First Amendment guarantees our democratic society ceases to exist.

Power solution discussed

Editor, Times-News:

We read much these days concerning how and where we are going to get electrical energy to supply our homes and farms in the years immediately ahead.

To say that we do not need more is a bit hard to understand, when we see so many new homes going up all around us. And each year sees a few new businesses coming into our community.

Surely these new homes will want refrigeration, stoves, dryers and the whole bit, even electric heat.

New wells will be drilled as long as permits issued for them. So the demand for power is going to increase whether we like it or not.

When do we get the power to meet these increased demands?

Wind chargers have been suggested. They were used in my father's day, but they went out with the iron-wheeled wagons.

The use of only a few 60 watt bulbs hanging from the ceiling of the home is a far different matter than supplying energy for a kitchen range, home heating and a few electric pumps.

Additional dams in the river are suggested, but where are we to put them? There are no sights left, and even if we were to squeeze in another dam or so, the small amount of energy it would provide just simply isn't enough.

Check the increased number of kilowatt hours used on your own power bill and then multiply that by all the families in southern Idaho, and you will find any new dam already overloaded even before you can pick out a place to put it.

We read of objections to a coal-fired generator, but to get factual information to support these objections is a difficult thing to do.

For any of us with average intelligence to believe that a coal-fired generator will foul up the environmental balance of our Snake River Valley is a bit hard to swallow, when we can find no reports issued by our leading universities saying so.

To my knowledge, no Health department in any of the fifty states says so. And the groups in our federal government who have objected to cranberries, laetrile, saccharine and, yes, even mother's milk they say is contaminated.

If this group hasn't objected to a coal-fired furnace, surely then they must be A-OK, when built to required standards.

None of us want to pay more for electrical energy, and none of us want to help pay for new power to be supplied to the next new farm to go in down the road. But whether these things have anything to do with it or not, our power bills are going up.

Of the 147 leading utility companies in the United States, only five charges less than our present supplier for an average residential bill averaging 1000 kilowatt hours per month, this as of Jan. 1976.

So when our 10- or 15- or 35- or 40-year-old generating plants have to be repaired or replaced, as they surely will, you can bet that inflation will be there.

We will find that the two-and-one-half times ratio will not be far off, just as it is not far off on a new car, a new home or a new suit of clothes. The added charges are going to be there, they cannot be avoided.

There are many other things to consider about this project, such as the ever-increasing demands placed on our community's social standards, the forever discussed tax base and the thing that haunts all of us, economic development.

When we consider all of these things, surely our good judgement will insist that we get behind this new generating facility and see to it that our energy requirements are protected for another few years.

Wants standard shift taught

Editor, Times-News:

I am a junior at the Twin Falls High School, and I am very concerned in regards to the Driver's Education Programs.

Last year I took driver's education, and I learned how to operate a car with an automatic transmission. I found it very easy to operate this type of car.

We did not have the opportunity to take a standard car out on the road to have proper training on how to operate the clutch and gear shift.

I believe it is quite simple to drive an automatic and very complicated to drive a standard car. I think that more time should be spent on teaching the students to operate a standard car.

I wish I could have been taught to drive a standard. My family owns a car with a standard transmission. It was difficult for me to learn to operate because of the lack of training I received.

I hope that if more people realize how badly additional education is needed in the standard shifting cars, something will be done to help the student.

Please take what I am saying under consideration. I'm sure it will benefit in the future.

Nuclear preferred to coal

Editor, Times-News:

In all the verbal smoke and dust being generated over Idaho Power's application for a coal-fired power plant, one important point is being ignored.

Idaho has been in the forefront of the nuclear age with INEL for years. It has been a clean, nearly accident free "good neighbor." Many jobs and other benefits have accrued without undue bad effects.

Yet, all the propaganda, pro and con, on the power plant issue centers on coal. If one wants to see a dirty eyesore, go see the Four Corners power plant near Farmington, New Mexico. It's coal fired and there is no doubt that it's coal fired.

I'm inclined to think Idaho needs the additional power or will by the time a plant or dam or whatever is built, but why in the world don't we insist on a modern, safe, clean, job-producing nuclear plant?

It couldn't be that big coal companies, big railroads and other "biggies" involved in fuel, transportation, production and their related unions are grinding their axes in disregard of the best interests of Idahoans could it?

Kids need sports attention

Editor, Times-News

I, along with many other parents, am very disappointed with the sports section of the Times-News.

There was always mention of the men and women softball games, but what happened to the children's leagues? I think it would be nice to have these small, aspiring, young athletes have some attention, too.

The knothole playoff teams were told they would be awarded ribbons and have their picture in the paper. They did get their ribbon from the Parks and Recreation Dept. but no pictures by the Times-News.

Thank you for your interest in the youth of today.

Thanks to God

Prayer for today

Help us to be ourselves, God.

In your creation, there is endless variety. No two snowflakes and no two flowers are exactly alike.

No two people are exactly alike either. But we try so hard to conform. We try to imitate others whom we admire. We almost act ashamed of being different, so we try to dress and talk and act just like everyone else.

Help us, dear God, to find a way to appreciate and express our uniqueness. Even our relationship with you will be different. Help each of us to be the person you meant us to be.

$672,000 distributed, anyway

Nobody came to the drought

HOLLISTER — In the summer of 1977, they gave a drought in Twin Falls County but nobody came.

Despite the U.S. Department of Agriculture's declaration of Idaho as a drought-striken area, brimful irrigation canals carried ample water to all 280,000 acres of croplands in Twin Falls County this summer.

Idaho Department of Water Resources spokesman Norman Young now concludes Twin Falls and Salmon tract farmers "essentially escaped" any bad effects from the drought.

Yet 370 Twin Falls area farmers will collect a total of $672,000 in federal drought assistance by year's end.

These farmers, most of whom received 100 per cent of their historical water allocation, used federal money earmarked for drought victims to buy new sprinkler systems, irrigation pipe and cement ditches.

Some of the most well-to-do growers in southern Idaho received up to $2500 from the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) to help ease the pain of drought.

A hypochondriac's pain, in essence, a phantasmal pain caused by a drought which didn't materialize.

Distribution of thousands of drought-assistance dollars to farmers largely untouched by the dry winter was altogether legal.

Farmers who got the federal money filled out forms and sketched maps which convinced the local ASCS office they could use money to conserve water.

Many farmers probably did conserve some water with their federal drought money.

For this reason, state ASCS director Wilber Boyd stoutly defends passing out drought checks to water-rich Twin Falls farmers.

Boyd makes his case by arguing farmers who have water should get the drought money so they can save water for others.

But even the ASCS can't explain how water saved on the Twin Falls tract possibly could help parched farmers far from the Snake River where the drought hit like a sirocco.

The ASCS finally admits the real reason Twin Falls County farmers got the second-highest share of drought assistance in Idaho is due primarily to the high number of requests for help.

Because they asked for the drought money, Twin Falls farmers got it — even though they didn't need it.

Congress didn't know Twin Falls County would escape the drought of '77 when it passed the $100 million emergency drought-assistance bill.

But Twin Falls County farmers knew.

Dispersal of $672,000 to fight the drought in Twin Falls County simply is an example of an out-of-touch federal bureaucracy being manipulated by some sharp farmers.

Many of the irrigators whose land now is irrigated by the federally-funded pipes will surely justify their drought gifts saying they rightfully should take federal money as long as it is offered.

How many of these farmers, however, also are vocal opponents of big government?

How many complain about high taxes and wasteful federal programs?

When the ASCS, a branch of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, decided to offer $2500 Christmas presents in July to Twin Falls County farmers, the chance arose for the irrigators to graciously bypass a government handout.

To their credit, two out of three Twin Falls area farmers decided to let the un-needed gift slide.

Since two-thirds of the 2100 county farmers didn't apply for the federal aid, the nagging suspicion remains that the 700 farmers who asked for federal money knew better.

Early in 1977 the water outlook for Idaho wasn't rosy.

Yet any Twin Falls farmer who talked to his canal company executives last spring once again would have discovered the Twin Falls tract has the best water rights of any irrigated lands in Idaho.

They would have learned the Snake River dams upstream from Twin Falls County held adequate water for 1977.

Maybe next year a drought could hurt. But in 1977, water would be available.

Sure enough, the canal company called it right and delivered over four feet of irrigation water to irrigated fields throughout the county.

But, 270 farmers on the Twin Falls tract still were handed checks for being victims of a drought.

Another 100 farmers on the Salmon Tract received money from the government, too.

Always short of water, the 100 Salmon tract farmers who received the drought assistance came closest to legitimately claiming the checks.

But in Hollister only a few days ago, Salmon Canal Company executive director Larry Regain thought and thought but finally couldn't name a single farmer he would classify as being hard hit by a lack of water this summer.

The cleanest way to explain away this disparity of giving the water-rich $672,000 earmarked for the water-poor would go to blame it on Congress.

From 2000 miles away, all Idaho looked dry last spring and a hastily written drought-assistance package left loopholes for some farmers to cop free pipe and cement ditches.

But the cutting edge of the $672,000 question is that farmers in Twin Falls County had to decide whether to grab for the $2500 gifts to fight a drought which wasn't much of an enemy.

Over 700 of them tried.

Perhaps that explains why the federal government is so big and costs so much.

When it finally comes time for individuals to decide whether to hoodwink the bumbling beast, even the harshest critics of federal obesity sometimes grab for their pound of flesh.

Questions on pesticides buildup answered

Editor, Times-News:

Your editorial of Sunday, August 8, 1977, entitled "PESTICIDES BUILDUP NEED ATTENTION" has prompted me to answer several question you have raised.

Your first paragraph suggests Idaho farmers should spend time investigating new ways of controlling insect pests. We in the Agricultural Chemical industry couldn't agree more. In fact, we invented the Integated Pest control programs of using biological controls of predatory pests such as lady bugs, lacewing flies and others.

Attractants in the form of sound, light and chemicals can be used. Genetic techniques of manipulation of genes in insects to disrupt their reproductive processes are also used.

Sterility of insects have also been used to control insects in conjunction with chemicals. The best example of this is the screw worm eradication program in Texas.

Cultural measures and sanitation practices are designed to prevent insect breeding in excess numbers. Resistant crops to insect attack are also used and are probably one of the most fruitful of the long-range approaches.

I can assure you, Idaho farmers and ranchers and their partners, the agri-businessman, are using all these techniques to control pests.

We agree that Agriculture is a polluter of Idaho streams. Since 1903 when Idaho was changed from a barren desert barely able to support a few starving Indians into an agricultural empire, where now one farmer feeds himself and 49 townspeople, the streams in Idaho have contained agricultural pollutants. But for months now we've read about the sewer filth of the other 49 townsmen pouring into the rivers from Twin Falls, Jerome and other Magic Valley cities. These pollutants also contain phosphates and nitrates.

You mentioned run off from farm lands of highly toxic fertilizers and pesticides. Are you not aware that nitrates and phosphates that have been found in farm runoff are natural occurring chemicals in nature?

Prior to 1903 if the water of the Snake River had been tested by the gas chromotograph that the Department of Health and Welfare used in their tests, Nitrates and phosphates would have shown up. After all, phosphates are mined on the Snake River water shed. They have been there since God created this earth.

Recently the University of Wisconsin dug out some air-tight sealed samples of soil taken way back in 1909 and 1911 and ran tests on these virgin soils and found the presence of such insecticides as Aldrin, Dieldrin and Heptachlor. Those insecticides were not invented or synthesized until 1945, thirty five years after those samples were taken.

The gas chromotograph is blind, it can not distinguish between "natural soil components" and insecticides.

Yes, in 1977, farmers have had to dump more pesticides on their soil than normal. But only because all the natural vegetation pests normally feed on is burned up by the drought. Irrigated fields are a banquet for these pests. The Magic Valley Farmers are doing this so all of us can continue to have a balanced, inexpensive diet.

Your statement of pesticide buildup in fish that end up on dinner tables is also not exactly right. A few years ago sensational reporting by the Idaho Fish and Game and your newspaper proclaimed dangerous levels of mercury in fish and pheasants coming from mercury-treated grain. This was later proven false when it was found that fish and pheasants in non-agricultural areas had the same level of mercury. The source — natural occuring mercury found and mined in many western states and around the world.

Again, the gas chromotograph is blind. It can not distinguish between a pesticide and natural occurring compounds.

You're correct in your last two paragraphs. Individual Idaho farmers don't use enough chemicals to single handedly pollute Idaho streams and rivers. NOR DO THEY COLLECTIVELY.

Idaho farmers live here too, and they too are environmentalist. They too hunt and fish and ski and commune with nature. They commune with nature every day. They are Stewards of our environment. They study and practice soil and water conservation and have been for over 100 years.

No one loves clean air and water as does the farmer. He has to: that's about all most of them live on due to manipulated prices that he is paid for his farm commodities.

But, regardless of what price he receives for his produce, he will be on the job tomorrow, while the rest of us sleep.

He will be guarding his environment and ours too. He will be using every technique that modern science can bring him. He will control weeds with herbicides, control diseases with fungicides, control insects with insecticides. He will use all the pest management techniques at his disposal. And he will continue to use the right amount of fertilizer at the right time so the rest of us can continue to have the safest, healthiest food in this world.

So the next time you write an editorial about the Idaho farmer have your facts straight and don't write it with your mouth full of food.

Editorial page allows expression of feelings

Editor, Times-News:

The usually thoughtful Times-News appears to have acted in anger in publishing the "Public Can Justify Mistrust of Big Oil" editorial of July 28. It may be a truism that what is published in pique is reread with regret. What possibly was intended to be an objective editorial turned out to be subjective and incorrect.

I take particular exception to your use of a pamphlet you were furnished that was published by the Standard Oil Company of California entitled "A National Energy Policy."

You make the statement that "the pamphlet details one large firm's position on the role government should play in the pricing of oil and gas." You go on to say that "the Standard Oil pamphlet reads in part 'higher prices will encourage more efficient use of energy and economic development of all types of energy resources'." — The actual sentence in the pamphlet reads "Because higher prices will encourage more efficient use of energy and economic development of all types of domestic energy resources, decontrol of energy prices is essential". The particular paragraph also goes on to state that "Controlling the price of natural gas, crude oil and oil products — and thus other energy prices — at low levels is doubly counterproductive; because it discourages both energy conservation and energy development."

— Without just taking from context subjectively, the material you were furnished does read differently. When you say "in part" you really mean it.

You continue using the material by saying "Then, the newsletter continues 'future increases in the price of imported oil will lead to increased domestic crude oil prices with resulting increased earnings for domestic producers'."

In the particular part of the pamphlet you "used in part" at this point in the article, the suggestion was being put forth that price controls on old crude oil should be removed over a period of perhaps five years to moderate the impact on the consumer, the economy and oil producers earnings. It further states that "the five years phase-out period on old oil price control will assure that the earnings of oil producers will not ruse unduly." Then, the pamphlet reads — "However, future increases, etc." Again, by quoting out of context, you place an entirely different connotation on what you printed than what was in the material being quoted, and then to add insult to injury, you invite your readers to "Read that paragraph again." Standard Oil admits that higher deregulated oil prices will mean bigger profits for the Company." That is not what the pamphlet states, and I'm certain that you were aware of that fact when you wrote the editorial.

Your editorial also stated an FEA task force had found American consumers were overcharged. Again incorrect. The task force making these accusations apparently was formed on the basis of a recommendation by consultants who said "regulations are very complex — often vague with frequent potential for multiple interpretations." Also, check your reference for exploration activities. There is more drilling for oil and gas going on this year than there has been for many years.

If your writer did, in fact, create this editorial in a fit of anger, I sincerely hope that it does not reflect the views of a respected newspaper such as the Times-News.

We do have a serious and complex energy problem in this country. An informed public is essential in arriving at a solution. Editorials such as yours certainly add nothing constructive.

Incidentally, if any of your readers would be interested in the pamphlet you so freely quoted from, I will be most happy to mail a copy directly to them.

'Sam' army buddy grilled

UPI

HOUSTON (UPI) — The young man, flanked by his attorneys, moved nervously through the office and to the reporters waiting for him. He was unaccustomed to the attention being given him and his blood-shot eyes mirrored it.

"I am sick about the situation," said Billy Dan Parker, 24, in response to a barrage of questions. Then he refused to speak again.

Parker had just finished an hour-long interview with a Brooklyn prosecutor about his knowledge of alleged "Son of Sam" killer David Berkowitz and how the jailed postal worker obtained the high-powered weapon used to kill six New Yorkers in a year-long murder spree.

Parker's attorney, Ralph Abercia, read a statement confirming Parker met "Son of Sam" suspect David Berkowitz in the Army at Ft. Polk, La., and later was stationed with him in Korea.

"I am giving my full cooperation to the authorities investigating this case," the statement read. "Upon advice of my attorneys I will make no further statement at this time."

Kidnapped executive free

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Kidnaped American executive William Andrew Weinkamer has been released three days after he was abducted at gunpoint by three men, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said Saturday.

The spokesman said the Weinkamer, manager of Clevite de Mexico, an automotive parts manufacturing subsidary of Gould, Inc., of Cleveland, was released late Friday, but gave no other details.

Unconfirmed reports said a ransom of 50 million Mexican pesos, equivalent to about $2.25 million, had been paid by the family for Weinkamer's release.

Police said Weinkamer was kidnaped Tuesday night by three men brandishing submachine guns as he was leaving his office in Naucalpan de Juarez, a northern industrial suburb of Mexico City.

Judge sentences politician

CHALMETTE, La. (UPI) — When he ran in a crowded Democratic primary about a year ago, Richard Tonry told voters he wanted to help clean up a Watergate-tainted Washington.

Monday, Tonry enters Maxwell Federal Prison Camp in Montgomery, Ala., to begin a one-year sentence for violating campaign finance laws designed to guard against Watergate-era practices.

After months of claiming he was the victim of an overzealous Republican prosecutor, Tonry pleaded guilty July 28 to four misdemeanors, including accepting illegal campaign contributions and promising political favors.

A federal judge, chastizing him for leading the public to believe he was innocent, sentenced Tonry to one year in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Former Attorney General John Mitchell, whose misuse of power was cited by Tonry in his reformist campaign last year, is in the same prison.

Kings and queens frolic

PALMA DE MALLORCA, Spain (UPI) — Former King Constantine and ex-Queen Ana Maria of Greece arrived Saturday in Jordanian King Hussein's plane for a vacation with Spanish King Juan Carlos and Greek-born Queen Sophia of Spain.

The former royal couple of Greece will stay for about a week at the Spanish monarch's Balearic vacation retreat, Marivent Palace, palace sources said.

Two weeks ago, King Baudouin and Queen Fabiola of Belgium visited Juan Carlos and Sophia at the Palace.

The Spanish couple returned the visit earlier this week by taking a yacht trip to Motril on the Costa del Sol, where the Belgian king and queen have a beach house.

Constantine and Ana Maria flew in from Jordan where they had visited with Hussein. They were met at the airport by Juan Carlos and Sophia, their three children and the mother of Sophia and Constantine, exQueen Federica of Greece.

CHIP AND CARON CARTER WITH SON

'fish bowl' atmosphere may have caused split

Chip moves out

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter blew up at his son Chip last week for wanting to separate from his wife, Caron, and Chip moved out of the White House, informed sources said Saturday.

The sources said Carter ordered his son to move out, but White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said Chip was not kicked out, although he has left the White House and is staying elsewhere in the Washington area for a few days before leaving for Plains, Ga.

Chip, who earlier this month quit his part-time job with the Democratic National Committee, plans to return to Plains without Caron and their 9-month-old son, James Earl Carter IV, to "help out with the family peanut business in a busy season," said Mary Hoyt, First Lady Rosalynn Carter's press secretary.

White House sources said Carter had a "blow up" with his son when both were in Plains last Tuesday. Chip returned to Washington that night. The President arrived in Washington, along with Caron, the following night, had a showdown with Chip at the White House and "booted him out," the sources said.

Carter has preached the sanctity of marriage and family life since he moved into the White House and was said to be angry with Chip for wanting to separate from Caron.

Mrs. Hoyt would not confirm or deny the reports of marital problems between Chip, 27, and Caron, 26, "It's a private matter," she said.

Mrs. Hoyt said Chip is going to Plains and Caron and the baby will stay at the White House "for a while. It is expected that Caron and the baby will join Chip later," she said.

"The decision is that he is going to Plains and she is going to stay here. I'm not going to label this as something more than a family decision."

Father-in-law says 'spat' won't last

HAWKINSVILLE, Ga. (UPI) — Caron Carter's father said Saturday the goldfish bowl atmosphere of the White House may have led to a "spat" between his daughter and son-in-law, Chip Carter.

Caron's father, Ben Griffin, said, however, he doubts his daughter will permanently separate from her husband. All young couples "have their splits and spats," he said.

Griffin, who is in the farming supply business, said the pressures of living at the White House may have strained Chip and Caron's marriage.

Caron, who has a 6-month-old baby, James Earl Carter IV, enjoys living in Washington, but the constant publicity makes it hard for her and Chip to have a regular marriage, Griffin said.

"I rather suspect a little couple getting married in Hawkinsville finds it hard enough to get adjusted to one another," he said. "And when you throw them into the limelight where everything they do is publicized ... it's hard.

"It may be that they are separating, but I rather doubt it ... I think every young couple has their splits and spats," Griffin said.

During the harvesting season Chip will have to work 18 hour days, according to Griffin. He said Caron might stay at the White House this fall because of the cost of flying back and forth.

"I rather suspect Caron will move back if he (Chip) decides to stay" in Plains, Griffin said.

$300 to exhibits at Filer fair

FILER — A total of $300 has been earmarked for school exhibits in the Twin Falls County Fair Sept. 6-10.

The exhibits must be of 1976 and 1977 school work, according to Mrs. Orville Sackett and Mrs. Joe Fix, both Filer, superintendents of the youth department.

Entries in this department are divided into two classes, those of children 8-14 years inclusive, and those of young people 15-18 years inclusive.

Premiums in both classes in three places are available for clothing, handwork, culinary exhibits, models, pictures and miscellaneous.

Young people who enter exhibits will find the fair much more enjoyable if they have something of their very own on display there, said the superintendents.

They may enter clothing they have made including dresses, pantsuits, sports wear, ponchos, sleep wear, skirts, crocheted and knitted sweaters. Many hobbies are included in the handwork division, such as afghans, crewel embroidery, macrame, needlepoint, tole painting, embroidery work, yarn work and many others.

In the culinary division, they may compete for ribbons for breads, cakes, candies, cookies, cupcakes, canned fruits and vegetables.

Model airplanes, boats, cars and miscellaneous are popular items in the youth department. These must all be hand painted. Pictures must be mounted for display and may be of charcoal, chalk, oils, water color and other media.

There are classes for cartoons and posters.

Other hobbies are included in the large miscellaneous division which includes candles, ceramics, collections, jewelry, leather work, nature craft, decoupage, terrariums, string craft, wood work and many others.

Carter may sign pact in Panama

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter may travel to Panama to sign the new Canal Zone treaty and has "cautious optimism" it will be ratified by the Senate, a White House spokesman said Saturday.

"A decision has not been made, but that is a possibility," the spokesman said when asked if Carter would fly to Panama for a ceremonial signing.

Detailed treaty terms are expected to be ready in about two weeks.

The spokesman said Carter has "cautious optimism" the treaty will be ratified "but he does not underestimate" opposition to it from persons who do not want to relinquish U.S. control of the strategic waterway.

The White House Saturday released a letter Carter sent to members of Congress on Friday along with a summary of the treaty.

"This is a difficult political question, and I need your help during the coming weeks," Carter wrote. "I am convinced that the treaties are essential to ensure the continued effective use of the canal for American commercial and security needs."

Under the treaty, the United States will surrender control of the canal to Panama at the turn of the century, but a separate neutrality pact guarantees America a permanent right to defend the waterway in case of attack.

A White House official said the neutrality pact is a "major breakthrough" which will answer critics who say the United States will have "no guarantees" it can use the canal in the next century.

In other developments, Carter planned to see Budget Director Bert Lance at the White House Monday on government reorganization plans.

A White House official said there is "no expectation" Lance will resign in the face of an inquiry into his past business transactions.

Carter and his aides have decided to withhold comment while the investigation by the Comptroller of the Currency is underway.

EGYPTIAN STUDENT TAREK EL SAJED CHATER LED AWAY FROM PLANE
. . . teenage hijacker overpowered by police in Italy Saturday

Majority rule plan ready for Rhodesia, Vance says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said Saturday the Anglo-American plan for majority rule in Rhodesia by 1978 is now complete, and will be made public once it has been presented to black and white African leaders.

Vance, speaking to reporters as he crossed the Atlantic after a two-week tour to the Middle East and London, said the package would be presented by British Foreign Secretary David Owen and the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, Andrew Young.

Vance arrived at Andrews AFB at 7:10 p.m. EDT.

The secretary said the plan, which includes a proposed detailed constitution plus "annexes," was finally completed Saturday in talks that involved Vance, Owen and British Prime Minister James Callaghan.

Vance gave some details to Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere Saturday and will lay out the plan on Monday to Joshua Nkomo, leader of the Patriotic Front — one of the leading black militant organizations in Rhodesia.

The plan has been under negotiation for the past six months and replaces a British initiative rejected at the Geneva conference of 1976.

Vance refused to make the details of the plan public until it has been presented to the black and white parties to the negotiations. But he said it was "an evolution of earlier plans."

The secretary listed some of the broad principles, among them:

— The plan will continue to focus on a constitution after independence, rather than on the transitional arrangements.

— Majority rule, based on the principle of one-man, one vote, is to be achieved during 1978.

— It will require a ceasefire by all parties and an end to the guerrilla action before the elections of the new government take place.

"We believe the plan should commend itself to the parties and to international opinion," Vance said.

The package was explained to South African Foreign Minister R.F. Botha during a five-hour session Friday in London. Owen said later he felt the Anglo-American plan had the continued support of the South African government.

Vance is to explain the final details to President Carter at the White House Sunday in a meeting scheduled for 2 p.m.

Vance returned Saturday, a day later than scheduled, after an 11-day Middle Eastern trip that covered six countries and quick return trips to three of them.

Although he did not succeed in creating a framework for a Geneva Middle East conference, he did get the agreement of the Arab and Israeli governments to intensify the negotiations during the U.N. General Assembly in New York in September.

Teenage hijacker spouts Shakespeare, wanted peace

BRINDISI, Italy (UPI) — A Shakespeare-quoting Egyptian teenager who hijacked an Air France jet carrying 242 persons and threatened to blow it up reportedly told authorities Saturday he did it because he wanted to restore peace between Egypt and Libya.

Brindisi district attorney Franco De Giorgio, the examining magistrate, said "I believe he is a congenital liar."

Tarek El Sajed Khater, 19, reportedly a psychology student in Cairo, was charged with air piracy and kidnaping after questioning by authorities.

The Air France airbus was commandeered Friday afternoon while on a flight from Paris to Cairo. It was diverted to Libya and then to Brindisi, where it landed with only 11 minutes of fuel left.

The young hijacker was overpowered by the ground crew at Brindisi Airport after the stepped outside and the plane's crew slammed the jet's door shut, locking him out. He beat on the door with an ax but couldn't get back in.

Passengers said the hijacker quoted Hamlet's "to be or not to be" soliloquy and constantly daubed himself with perfume. They said at one point he held up a cookie tin and said "I have 1,000 pounds of dynamite and can blow up the plane."

De Giorgio said Khater told him: "My action was intended to bring back peace between Egypt and Libya (who engaged in a border war July 19-24). My father, a professor at Cairo University, was killed in the fighting and I wanted to persuade the two governments to make peace."

According to passengers, he made no reference to the Egypt — Libya tension when haranguing them in a mixture of English, French and Arabic on the aircraft's public address system.

De Giorgio said, "For a moment we thought he was under the influence of drugs. He certainly has some funny ideas going round in his head."

An Egyptian passenger said, "As far as I could see he is right round the bend, a total madman."

During rambling negotiations with police at Brindisi Airport, the hijacker allowed 20 Arabic women, children and old passengers to disembark in exchange for more fuel.

He then stepped out of the airliner to talk to ground personnel who were carrying out the refueling. He was armed with a small ax seized from the aircraft's emergency equipment.

The Air France crew promptly slammed the door and, as he beat on it with the ax, the captain revved up the engines and moved off.

Rebels hold town in Ethiopia

DAMASCUS, Syria (UPI) — Eritrean rebels said Saturday they have captured the town of Khwala in their bid to wrench control of Ethiopia's northern region from the control of the Addis Ababa government.

The Eritrean Liberation Front, in a communique released in Damascus, said the town in the southern Eritrean region of Sral was captured Friday night.

The communique described the town, 45 miles south of the Eritrean capital of Asmara, as the second most important in the Sral region.

The ELF and two other guerrilla groups fighting Addis Ababa for nearly 20 years have announced a series of victories in recent months and say they have nearly isolated Asmara from the rest of Ethiopia.

Only Asmara ..... the key ports of Assab and Massawa remain under Ethiopian control, according to the the rebel groups. They say they control up to 95 per cent of the embattled province.

France spearheads drive for Palestinian homeland

NEW YORK (UPI) — France is spearheading an effort to write a new U.N. Security Council resolution that would call for a Palestinian homeland as well as recognition of Israel's right to exist, CBS News reported Saturday.

French diplomats are "sympathetic" to the Palestinian Liberation Organization's demand for a new measure to replace U.N. Resolution 242, CBS said in its nightly television news broadcast.

Resolution 242 calls for Israeli withdrawal from territories captured in the 1967 Middle East War and the recognition of Israel's right to exist. It only refers to the Palestinian issue as a refugee problem.

U.S. and Arab informants have recently said the PLO might agree to accept an ammended resolution that would call for a Palestinian homeland as well as recognition of Israel.

CBS said the French think the "PLO might accept such an approach but the attitude of the Carter administration is highly uncertain."

Racial violence strikes London

LONDON (UPI) — Hundreds of leftists wielding fence posts and hurling bricks, bottles and smokebombs Saturday broke up an anti-black demonstration in a black neighborhood, then turned on police in London's worst political violence in three years.

Scotland Yard said 45 policemen were injured, including two stabbed and two hit in the eyes with ammonia. Local hospitals reported at least 59 persons were treated, including two for stab wounds.

One quarter of the city's entire police force — 4,000 officers — was mobilized and Scotland Yard reported 209 arrests.

Police used transparent riot shields to defend themselves against "bombs" of pepper, caustic soda and ammonia as well as rocks, clubs, bottles and beer cans.

Several hundred leftists laid siege to a police station, burning a police motorcycle before being driven back.

The riot erupted over a march by the right-wing National Front party through the heavily black neighborhood of Deptford and neighboring Lewisham on the south bank of the Thames river.

The extreme left-wing Socialist Workers party, joined by other groups including local Anglican Bishop Mervyn Stockwood and other church leaders, called a counter-protest when the courts and the government refused to ban the Front demonstration.

It was the most violent left-right confrontation in the capital since a similar leftwing attempt to break up a Front rally ended in the death of a student in 1974.

No Mountain Bell strike

DENVER (UPI) — Negotiators for Mountain Bell and representatives for 28,000 employees in eight Rocky Mountain States reached agreement Saturday night on a new local union contract, averting a scheduled strike at midnight.

The local agreement between Mountain Bell and the Communications Workers of American, as well as a national agreement last week, is subject to ratification by union members.

Robert Thompson, Mountain Bell assistant vice president, said the "The new union contract is a fair and equitable settlement which contains substantial benefits for our employes."

"We are pleased with the agreement and that we were able to halt a work stoppage," he said.

The agreement, on non-wage subjects such as work assignments and vacations, covers employes in Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, Arizona, New Mexico and El Paso County in Texas.

Bacteria in Idaho City water

IDAHO CITY, Idaho (UPI) — State health officials say about 20 persons in Idaho City have experienced symptoms of diarrhea, vomiting and abdominal bloating since Monday after drinking water or eating.

Dick Rogers, environmental engineering specialist for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, said two of the four water samples he took Tuesday showed drinking water Tuesday out of Grimes Creek.

The source of the contamination has not been nailed down yet, according to Rogers.

"I'm sheerly speculating when I say the problem might be from the low flow in Elk Creek or a source contamination on Elk Creek. When water is as low and slow as Elk Creek is now, bacteria can multiply easily," he said.

In addition to bacteria, parasites were discovered in one person who was sick after drinking water Tuesday out Grimes Creek.

Until more is known about the problem, health officials are suggesting to all residents in Idaho City to boil all the water they use. Campers along creeks in the area are being advised not to drink out of the streams.

Return Alaska to Russia?

POCATELLO, Idaho (UPI) — Second District Congressman George Hansen attacked the Carter administration's recent treaty negotiations on the Panama Canal Friday by asking tongue in cheek, "Inasmuch as the Carter administration plans to give the Panama Canal back to the Panamanians, why not go all the way and give Alaska back to the Russians?"

Hansen said his research disclosed that in 1907 the Supreme Court ruled that the Panama Canal belonged to the United States "just as much as Alaska."

"Everything considered, there is little difference between the proposals. One makes about as much sense as the other," Hansen said.

Drought funds date extended

BOISE (UPI) — An extension has been granted on the emergency livestock feed program, Gov. John V. Evans said Thursday.

The Federal Disaster Assistance Administration moved the deadline to May 15, 1978. The initial cutoff date was Sept. 1.

The emergency program subsidizes livestock feed purchases where supplies are inadequate due to the drought.

Bear Lake, Blaine, Elmore, Idaho, Lincoln and Washington Counties are eligible for the program. Requests still are pending for Adams and Caribou Counties, Evans said.

Father of 'Son of Sam' killer 'grieves' with victims' parents

MINEOLA, N.Y. (UPI) — The heartbroken father of David Berkowitz, the confessed "Son of Sam" killer, tearfully extended his sympathy Saturday to the victims' families.

"If David did these things, I don't expect you (parents) to forgive him. That would be too much to ask of you," Nathan Berkowitz, the suspect's grey-haired adoptive father, said at a news conference cut short when he broke down and wept.

"I ask you not to burden us with your feelings toward David. We too are victims of this tragedy," said the elder Berkowitz, his voice breaking as he read from a handwritten statement outside a court building here.

"My loss is not because of a son whom I adopted, but my loss is multiplied by what each and every one of the parents of these crime victims feel in his or her heart," he said.

"To all the parents who lost their children or had their children injured, I deeply grieve with all my heart."

Young Berkowitz, a 24-year-old postal worker and former auxiliary policeman, was arrested outside his Yonkers, N.Y., apartment Wednesday night, ending a manhunt that eclipsed those for England's Jack the Ripper and New England's Boston Strangler.

Police said he is the man who murdered six persons and wounded seven others with the same .44-caliber revolver in a year-long reign of terror in lovers' lanes around the city. He reportedly told police he killed on the command of a dog.

He is in isolation in a "Spartan" cell at Kings County Hospital, where psychiatrists are examining him to determine if he can be held criminally responsible for the ambush murders.

"I don't know whether what was written about David is true or not," the father said. "From what I read, my mind can't deny what my heart accepts."

"The only thing I do ask of you is to understand the pain and agony that is within me, knowing the pain and agony of all you parents," he said.

Berkowitz, who wore tinted eyeglasses, a yellow rain-jacket and gray pants, said he had been living "a normal life in retirement". In Fort Lauderdale, Fla., until he learned his son had been arrested Wednesday for the crimes committed by the man known as Son of Sam.

"Then my life was turned around and I keep thinking this is only a bad dream," he said.

Berkowitz refused to give newsmen any details of his son's life when he was living with the family.

The father flew to New York soon after the arrest to help arrange the defense for his son, whom he has not seen since "last summer." Berkowitz said he has not yet seen his son.

Asked what he would say when he meets with him, Berkowitz' voice broke and he said, "I don't know, it will be spontaneous."

The distraught man said that the first time he became aware of the Son of Sam killings was right after the second of the six murders. "I thought it was a nut doing it," he said.

He added that until his son was arrested, he never thought that David might be responsible for the slayings.

Berkowitz was asked what his reaction was when he was notified of his son's arrest. He replied "I cried." Then, he put his hands over his face and wept.

At that, attorney Ira Jultak asked that the news conference be concluded.

Western fires prove stubborn

BOISE (UPI) — The Boise Interagency Fire Center reported Saturday that firefighters in the western states have contained or controlled 36 major fires totaling 171,000 acres this week.

As of Saturday morning, however, six major blazes remained out of control and total acreage on these was reported to be up to 140,000.

The Marble-Cone Fire, still burning in California's Big Sur Country, accounted for 117,000 of these acres, while other fires in California, Colorado, Oregon and Washington made up the rest.

The stubborn Marble-Cone Fire continues to spread despite the efforts of 4500 firefighters to contain it. The blaze has jumped fire lines on its north, east and south sides. Seventy miles of line have been built, with 33 miles yet to go.

Dry lightning touched off a series of new blazes in northern California and southern Oregon yesterday evening. Dry fuels and strong winds have enlarged one of these fires — the Fong, in California's Klamath National Forest to 800 acres, and the Hog Ridge Fire also in the Klamath to 650 acres.

Five other fires ranging in size from 20 to 220 acres are also burning uncontrolled in that same area.

In the Deschutes National Forest, 30 miles south of Bend, Oregon, the Green Butte Fire stood at 600 acres, with no estimate of when it will be contained.

Firefighters in Colorado hoped to contain the 3,700-acre Deep Creek Fire on Sunday. Some rain has fallen in this area, and the cooler air and higher humidity have assisted the 400 firefighters in their efforts to contain this blaze.

The weather outlook for the weekend continued, however, to be dry and hot, with the possibility of lightning remaining good in northern California, Oregon, Washington and the panhandle of Idaho.

'Hookers' made $5,000

RENO (UPI) — Cooks, maids and helpers at the Mustang Ranch brothel have testified they were paid from a "tip fund" supplied by prostitutes who earned a total of about $5,000 a night.

Whether the employes other than prostitutes were paid via the tip fund or by owners Joe and Sally Conforte is a central issue in the federal court trial in which the Confortes are accused of failing to pay employe payroll taxes amounting to about $60,000.

Government attorneys Thursday sought to show the employes took orders from the Confortes, not the prostitutes. But a series of employes testified that, although the Confortes may have been the brothel's bosses, the wages came from the girls.

Shuttle doubts now over, 'frenetic years' begin

EDWARDS AFB, Calif. (UPI) — The flight of Enterprise removed "an enormous amount of uncertainty" from the space shuttle program but the director says key hurdles remain before the orbital transport's initial space test in 1979.

"There's a lot left to be done," said Dr. Myron Malkin. "We're entering two frenetic years."

Malkin said the 5½ minute gliding flight of the Enterprise from a Boeing 747 to a desert landing Friday "was a real triumph for the technology and dedication of the people that put it together.

"It's a key step. It removes all those doubts about, well, maybe it won't fly like we say. We know what we're doing now. It removes an enormous amount of uncertainty."

He said the flight went so well that Enterprise pilots Fred Haise and Gordon Fullerton said no changes were needed in the computer programs that simulate shuttle flying in a special ground trainer at the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

"This particular flight seems to have established that our understanding of the subsonic aerodynamic qualities are just about exactly what we thought they were."

Malkin, who heads overall development and testing of the winged spaceship, said one of the biggest milestones yet to be passed is completion of testing of the advanced hydrogen-oxygen engines that will help propel the shuttle into space.

"The high pressure engines have had a variety of engineering problems but Malkin said 2,800 seconds of test time had been achieved at the National Space Technology Laboratory at Bay St. Louis, Miss., during the past two weeks.

"That is more test time than we put on in the previous four months," he said in an interview after the Enterprise solo. "I think we have just turned the corner with the engines."

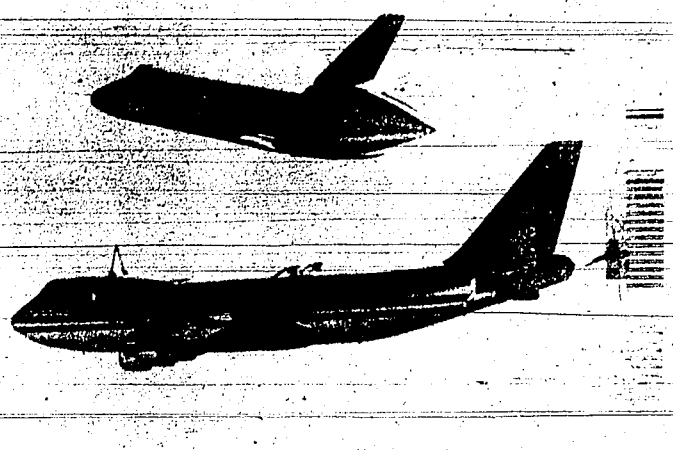

The shuttle will be helped into orbit by two large solid propellant booster rockets and the first of these was successfully test fired last month at the Thiokol Chemical Corp. plant outside Brigham City, Utah.

The first of the 154-foot belly tanks that will carry liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen for the shuttle's main engines is scheduled to be completed Sept. 9 at the Martin Marietta plant at Michoud, La.

Malkin said the second of five planned shuttles is running behind schedule at the Rockwell International assembly facility at nearby Palmdale and will be delivered to the Kennedy Space Center at Cape Canaveral, Fla., in October, 1978 — two months late.

But he said project officials still were aiming toward March, 1979, for the maiden space flight of the shuttle.

Enterprise, the first of the shuttles but the second to fly in orbit, is scheduled to be ferried to Marshall Space Flight Center at Huntsville, Ala., next March for vertical vibration tests with its booster rockets and a fully loaded fuel tank attached.

Shuttle means new health concerns

HOUSTON (UPI)—The coming era of the space shuttle and its promise to open space flight to more ordinary people makes emergency medical care a more important consideration for those who plan orbital missions.

"Heretofore, an astronaut went up into space and had pretty much the perfect body. The backup on the ground had to be fairly minimal," said Roger Koch of Boeing Aerospace Co.

"With the shuttle, you're got all kinds of Toms, Dicks and Harrys going into space. Later on, you're going to have just passenger types, maybe laborers, and you're looking at potential heart cases, appendicitis, et cetera."

With this in mind, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration paid Boeing Aerospace $100,000 to draft conceptual plans for an expanded ground-to-orbit medical consultation system, the first step in solving the overall problem.

"As in past Apollo and Skylab programs, a medically trained crew member on board will be supported by NASA medical personnel on the ground at Johnson Space Center," Koch said.

"However, the space agency has recognized that in some cases specialized medical expertise which might be required will not be available at JSC."

Boeing recommends closing that gap with a sophisticated electronic hookup between a Texas medical center yet to be chosen. JSC located 30 miles south of Houston and the paramedic and his patient hundreds of miles out in space.

"It would permit a medical specialist to be placed in voice, telemetry and video contact with the NASA doctor at JSC, the patient and the on-board medical crewman," Koch said.

In emergencies, needed specialists would be located through a paging system and called to a console—complete with voice communications, video data terminal and television screen—to be placed in the chosen medical center.

Boeing senior engineer Bruce J. Goss said the first-year contract, which ended July 15, bought NASA "the information they will need to go the next step, which will be system design and procurement and modification of existing systems."

systems."

Goss said tentative plans are to phase in the new system beginning with space shuttle orbital flight 10, in the 1980s. More definite decisions will be made later.

Orbital test flights are scheduled to begin in March, 1979, with only astronauts on board for the first few missions.

"Somewhere in the end of the orbital flight test phase, they'll begin to phase the elements of this thing in so that it will be fully up in the first few flights of the operational phase," Goss said.

The shuttle, like the Apollos and Skylab of earlier manned missions, will be equipped with an elaborate medical kit containing a wide variety of drugs and instruments for basic medical care.

Aircraft design gains benefits

HOUSTON (UPI)—Space agency engineers predict a key practical payoff of the space shuttle rocket plane will be its contribution to the design of commercial airliners.

"It's going to allow a tremendous increase in efficiency of airplane design," said Christopher Kraft, director of the Johnson Space Center. "The techniques that we are developing now are going to be directly applicable to the next generation of commercial vehicles in this country."

This will happen, he said in an interview, with the use of computerized flight control systems based on the one that will translate the desires of space shuttle pilots into precise movements of its aerodynamic control surfaces.

In most airplanes today, there is a direct mechanical or hydraulic link between the pilot and controls. In the winged space shuttle, this is replaced by a "fly-by-wire" control system.

The shuttle has four main flight control computers plus 200 electronic "black boxes." The computers receive commands from the pilots and their navigation systems, perform the necessary computations and transmit the proper orders to the black boxes which in turn position shuttle control surfaces such as the elevator, flap and elevons, which combine the functions of elevators and ailerons in ordinary airplanes.

This is something like the human body works. The eyes and ears sense what is going on and signal the brain to react. The brain then transmits the proper instructions to the rest of the body such as legs, arms, hands and fingers.

The shuttle pilots can have the flight control system fly the ship automatically if they want. Or they can fly in what is called the control stick mode. This is expected to be the normal way of operating the shuttle. The pilots use a pistol-grip control stick to signal the computers how they want the craft to fly.

They also have the option of controlling the ship themselves with control surfaces responding only to their use of the stick and rudder pedals. This is expected to be a very difficult way to fly the shuttle.

Kraft said use of the computerized digital flight control system with its built-in redundancy will be extremely reliable and will allow airplanes to have smaller stability surfaces.

Money recovered in embezzlement case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — So far investigators have recovered $196,000 they say William Sibert embezzled from the government. Now they have only $650,000 to go.

Sibert, a $12,000-a-year Transportation Department clerk, was arrested in Las Vegas Friday and charged with embezzlement and fraud.

He had $59,000 with him at the time, the FBI said, and another $137,000 in a Maryland bak account. But officials say he spent a good deal of the rest of the $856,000 he is accused of skimming between May 16 and July 29.

Sibert's purchase list, supplied by the FBI, reads like a Saudi Arabian's shopping spree:

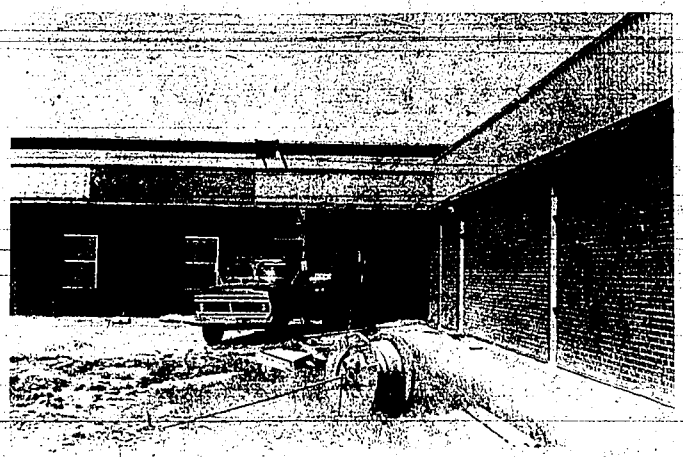

— A $60,000 house with swimming pool in Clinton, Md., and $30,000 for improvements, plus $9,000 for furnishings and $18,000 for appliances, stereos, and television.

— A 1974 30-foot houseboat.

— 12 luxury cars, one costing $35,000.

— $30,000 worth of stocks.

Sibert is being held under $100,000 bond in Las Vegas.

Work progresses

CONSTRUCTION on the four-classroom addition to the Hansen Elementary School will not be completed before school begins. Availability of building equipment has contributed to much of the delay.

Classroom construction unfinished

HANSEN—It now appears the four classroom addition to the Hansen Elementary School cannot be finished by the Aug. 29 start of classes.

Garth Miller, school superintendent, said it will probably be mid-September before the building can be ready for full use.

In the meantime, he said, the four classes which are in critical need of additional space will probably use the multi-purpose room.

"They have promised us the multi-purpose room will be finished by Aug. 29. It is so large, we think we can put one class in each corner temporarily," he said.

Miller said there have been some delays because some of the building equipment has been difficult to get.

Other buildings in the Hansen system have been cleaned, repainted and repaired and are ready for classes the superintendent said.

Residents of the district approved a $350,000 bond issue last October for expansion of the new Hansen Elementary School which was outgrown in its first year of use. Addition of a mobile home court with 50 new families and a new subdivision in the community, boosted the population of Hansen by about 40 per cent in a single year, Al Clawson of Clawson Construction Co., Twin Falls, is the new building's general contractor.

Public works funding allocated

BOISE (UPI) — Recreational facilities and land acquisition will soak up most of Idaho's share of the federal public works funding to the Bureau of Reclamation, regional director Rod Vissia said today.

Vissia Pacific Northwest region headed by Vissia has been allocated $92,022,000 for Idaho, Oregon, Washington, western Montana and western Wyoming, he said.

Continued construction of public facilities at Cascade Reservoir on the Payette River and completion of the land acquisition program underway at Montour are funded for $2,050,000.

Recreational facilities at American Falls Reservoir on the Snake River are allocated $350,000 for the year. Vissia reported.

Rehabilitation work at the Burley Irrigation District in southern Idaho will get $370,000.

Geothermal energy backed by chairman

ONTARIO, Ore. (UPI) — Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., of the House Ways and Means Committee says geothermal energy will play a major role in the nation's energy policy as an alternate source of power.

Back in his home district for the August recess, Ullman toured Bend, Burns, John Day, Sheep Rock, North Powder, Pendleton, LaGrande, Enterprise and Ontario this week. He told constituents what Congress is trying to do to help farmers and ranchers in the 19 drought-stricken Oregon counties.

In Ontario Thursday night, Ullman said the National Energy Plan approved by the House last Friday includes tax incentives for developing geothermal resources.

He said its provisions include a 10 per cent depletion allowance and deduction of intangible drilling costs for those involved in geothermal development.

"The energy bill approved by the House last week puts this country on the proper path toward a rational use of the dwindling supplies of fossil fuels," he said.

He said he was especially impressed at what he called "the leading role" eastern Oregon is taking in development of the geothermal resources.

Barbershops too much, say senators

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Since senators started paying for their own haircuts they have decided their exclusive barbershop was perhaps too exclusive.

Chairman Howard Cannon, D-Nev., of the Senate Rules Committee has written a letter to each of his colleagues advising them that one top aide for each now can get his locks trimmed at the formerly exclusive salon in the Capitol.

And the aides won't even have to get out of the chair half-shorn if a senator comes in for a haircut.

Cannon said since April 1, when senators had to start paying for their haircuts, shaves and shines, "the use of the facilities offered there has made it clear from a practical standpoint that the potential customer list should be expanded."

Therefore, Cannon told his fellow senators if they want to designate an aide to receive the service, "Please advise me at the earliest opportunity in order that a name list can be prepared."

Cannon also decreed:

"The barbershop policy will be that senators will be given preference among those seated in the waiting area. However, if a staff member is in a barber chair that service will be completed before the chair becomes available for a senator."

Myths on gardens refuted

By GEORGE ABRAHAM

GARDEN MYTHS DEBUNKED: There are many myths in the gardening world that need to be debunked. Here are some straight answers we give to thsee myths which come up annually.

1. What's a good perennial we can plant in spring and have it bloom all year long? Ans: There's no such thing. If you want a long show you must plant several perennials for a succession of bloom. When one fades out, another comes into bloom.

2. What are good evergreens we can plant without having to trim them? Ans. There's no such thing. Most evergreens need shearing or pruning to keep them in bounds. Takes only a few minutes to keep them shapely.

3. Do cucumbers cross with muskmelons, watermelons and pumpkins to give them an off-flavor? Ans: No, cukes don't cross. Flat, tasteless melons is due to temperature change or weather.

4. Do plants need a warm temperature at night or winter? Ans. No, most flowering plants like it cooler at night for longer life. Warmer items such as African Violets and tropical foliages like it a bit warmer at night.

5. Will sawdust and woodchips make a soil poisonous? Ans. No. Both are safe to use if you add a little extra nitrogen fertilizer.

6. Watering plants during the day will kill them, if sun is hot? Ans: No, although you will lose moisture due to evaporation.

7. Would it be wise to put our lawn into artificial grass (or black top)? Ans. No, you'd be foolish. Artificial grass heats up under a hot sun, sending midday air temperatures up as high as 150 degs. Tests show that live grass reduces September temperatures 15 degs. or more. Artificial turf is not cheap, either. Stick with live grass, even if it's half weeds.

8. Plants use up oxygen at night, so should not be in a sick room or bedroom? Ans. True, but nothing to worry about! A large plant might raise the normal carbon dioxide level about 11/1000 of 1 per cent, and decrease the oxygen level only four hundredths of a per cent during the night.

9. Are flowers in a hospital vase apt to be a hazard due to bacteria in the water? Ans. Not true. Your chance of getting infection from a vase of flowers is about same as your getting hit by an airplane while getting a haircut in a barber shop.

10. We just built a new home but don't you think we are too old to have shade trees planted. Ans: No, you're never too old to have shade trees planted. For a couple hundred dollars you can hire a balled and burlapped tree brought in, ready to give you instant comfort. Got any more "myths"? Please send them along and we'll print them.

KIWI FRUIT: Anyone who's eaten KIWI (Kee-Wee) fruit from the supermarkets knows it's really different. We've kept KIWI in the refrigerator for 4 months without losing it's fine flavor. Those you buy in stores might be somewhat hard or immature. The fruit tastes best when soft to touch. You can ripen it by placing fruit in a plastic bag with an apple or a banana and hold at room temperature. It will ripen in a couple days.

Can you start your own vines from the Kiwi fruit? Indeed, you can. The vines make good house plants, but don't expect fruit. Male and female flowers occur on different plants, which means you need a male and a female vine. Try it anyway! Take seeds from the fruit, dry it on a paper towel. Then sow in a mixture of sand and peatmoss, or vermiculite and perlite with peatmoss. The vine is a fast and rather rampant grower, making it ideal for a greenhouse.

PLANT CONTROL POLLUTION: Americans are having a hard time producing a car that's pollution free. Thank God we've got plants which constantly use man's pollution to make oxygen. For example, one tree will use the carbon dioxide which is given off by the average man in a day. That's why we need more trees. In fact, during our life span each person should plant and maintain 78 trees to use up the carbon dioxide given off by cars, factories, and everything else which supply each person in the U.S. with the necessities of life. So plant trees, shrubs, grass, flowers and vegetables. They are needed in and around every town and city for the oxygen they give off, as well as their beauty.

POCKET BOOK PLANT: Recently we stated that once the calceolaria or pocketbook plant finished flowering, it should be discarded. Several readers wrote to tell us it should not be discarded, but allowed to re-flower. Pick off the spent blooms and keep the plant watered regularly. The second blooming makes the plant into a hanging basket, which is effective. If the calceolaria happens to get real scraggly, it can be nipped back and allowed to send forth new buds on new growth. Feed a weak solution of a liquid plant food. If aphids are present, spray with malathion.

Question of the week:

D.F. of Twin Falls: "You've always said that the seed catalog was a good, reliable guide for growing vegetables. We've tried to use their figures on days to maturity but find they are not reliable. Some of our peppers were later in maturing than the catalog said, and the corn came on earlier. Why can't the seed companies use more accurate figures?"

Seed companies do the best they can to give you the average number of days needed from seeding to maturity. While this serves the purpose of indicating that one variety will mature before another, the actual number of days to maturity may not always be true because of weather conditions. As an example, peas are often listed as maturing in 60 days, but because of unusually cold weather in spring, the peas can be as much as 3 weeks late in maturing. So keep in mind that weather conditions can stimulate a given variety to bear earlier or considerably later than it says in seed catalogs or college recommendations.

R.D. of Tuttle "We have some roses and other ornamental plants and would like to start new ones from cuttings. Please tell us when and how it should be done."

Take slips or cuttings from your favorite shrub any time now. The cutting can be 4 to 5 inches long and from tip growth. Insert it into your favorite medium, such as perlite, vermiculite, sand or a mixture of peat moss and any of the above materials. Dip the woody cuttings into a rooting hormone (available in any garden store), then insert the cuttings to a depth of about 2". Water them well, and cover with a piece of cheese cloth or plastic sheet. A coldframe, large clay or plastic pot, or a wooden box makes a fine container for rooting theese. Some people insert the cuttings into the soil outdoors, covering with a glass jar. It's a good idea always to shade the cuttings from direct sun to prevent drying out.

Cassia County Fair to open soon

BURLEY — The Cassia County Fair officially opens Monday at the fairgrounds here.

Fair-associated competitive events have been under way during the past few days, but the social highlights of the celebration will come during the latter part of the week.

The big evening is Wednesday, kicking off with the parade through downtown Burley, at 3 p.m., with judging of entries to start at 2 p.m. at the Overland Shopping Center.

Parade marshal is longtime Burley businessman Gilbert (Gib) Parke, 76.

It will be followed by the annual Burley Lions barbeque at ... Park from 4:30 p.m. to ... p.m. and the 11th annual Burley Exchange Club Country Western Jamboree at the fairgrounds at 8 p.m.

National country music personalities for this year's jamboree are Mel Tillis, Minnie Pearl and Shub Wooley.

The stuttering Tillis captured the Country Music Association's award as Entertainer of the Year in 1976.

A composer and recording star ("Detroit City" won him a place in the Songwriters Hall of Fame), Tillis travels with his own band, The Statesiders.

Sheb Wooley is an actor, comedian, songwriter and recording star. He played a whiskey-drinking killer in "High Noon" and co-starred as a trail cowhand in the television series "Rawhide."

He has cut numerous records for MGM under the name of Ben Colder and has written and recorded numerous others under his own name.

Minnie Pearl for decades has been known as the top country western comedienne.

She is less well known by her real name — Sarah Ophelia Colley Cannon.

Tickets for the jamboree are on sale at a ticket booth in front of Bryan's Cafe in Burley from noon to 6 p.m. through Wednesday.

Another major event in the fair is the selection of the fair and rodeo queen, who will be crowned during Saturday's rodeo finale.

Four candidates for the honor began competition Saturday, being judged on personality and appearance at a queen's banquet. A breakfast will be held at 8:30 a.m. Monday in the Ramada Inn.

Horsemanship judging for the queen contestants will be at 8 a.m. Wednesday and the horsemanship section of the competition will begin at 8:30 a.m. The four candidates will ride during the three nights of the rodeo (8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday), with the eventual queen crowned during ceremonies on the final night.

Candidates are Karen Bedke, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Bedke, Burley; Julie Conrad, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Conrad, Murtaugh; Linda Helms, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Austin Helms, Oakley, and Sandra Robinson, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bud Robinson, Oakley.

Highlights of the 4-H and FFA livestock divisions include the grand champion round robin showmanship competition at 3 p.m. Friday at the fairgrounds and the fat stock sale at 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

Showing of livestock will begin with the dog judging at 9 a.m. Monday and the quality horse show at 3 p.m. Entry of all horses begins at 8 a.m. Monday, with other livestock to be entered between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. Tuesday.

Horses will be judged on fitting and showing performance at 8 a.m. Tuesday.

Livestock judging begins at 8 a.m. Wednesday and poultry will be judged at the same time. The sheep quality and fitting and showing competition will be at 10 a.m., with the dairy quality and fitting and showing to come at 1 p.m.

Swine judging of quality and fitting and showing will kick off competition at 7:30 a.m. Thursday before the beeves take over center arena.

Beef breeding quality judging will come at 8:30 a.m. Thursday, followed by modern beef quality at 9 a.m. Beef fitting and showing will be at 8:30 a.m. Friday.

The home economics and agricultural demonstration competition already was held this past Wednesday, but the 4-H livestock demonstrations will be at 1 p.m. Friday. A tractor driving contest is also scheduled then, with the 4-H and FFA awards program at 4 p.m.

Booth decorating, which began Saturday, will continue until 1 p.m. Monday, with exhibit entries except perishable produce from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. Monday. Vegetable entries will not be taken until 8-10 a.m. Wednesday.

Judging of the various exhibits will be Tuesday and Wednesday. Flowers will be entered Thursday morning and judged that afternoon.

Murder suit changed to fourth district

TWIN FALLS — A suit brought against the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare and Magic Valley Living Center as the result of a murder in Twin Falls in 1973, has been transferred by the Idaho Supreme Court to Fourth Judicial District Court.

Judge Theron W. Ward denied a motion for change of venue in the case of Mark Whitesides, Twin Falls, and his minor children against the state and living center. The matter was appealed to the Supreme Court and a change of venue granted. Judge Gerald Schroeder, Boise, will hear the case.

Whitesides brought action against the state and Magic Valley Living Center after a resident of the center was charged with the stabbing death of his wife, Cynthia Whitesides, as she was working alone during the lunch hour in a downtown gift shop.

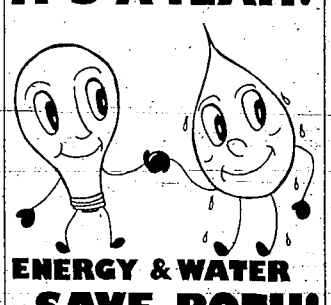

Edwards not prosecutor

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission member Mel Edwards is not a deputy prosecutor for Twin Falls County.

Edwards had been deputy prosecutor for the county for two-and-a-half years before resigning to devote himself to full-time private practice in July.

A story on the city's new zoning ordinance in Wednesday's Times-News newspaper contained the error. The Times-News regrets the error.

Parents get letters

BUHL—Letters covering the new high school student handbook, which emphasizes student responsibility for good behavior and study habits will be in the mail to parents of all students this week.

Dale Thornsberry, principal of the Buhl high school, said the new policy, drafted by himself and other faculty members will permit the administration to expel an incorrigible student from school. In the past, he said, some students have had such poor behavior they could not be tolerated by teachers and administration, but they remained in school unless truancy occurred.

Thornsberry presented the handbook—revisions to the board for approval Tuesday night. Board members approved the policy, subject to a review to determine if there are any conflicts with board policy.

Thornsberry said he feels there is a need to stress such values as honesty, consideration and accountability.

"I think it should be the student's responbility as well as that of the faculty and administration to turn out good citizens through our school system," he said.

Thornsberry said more emphasis is also needed on basic education.

"And by basic education I mean not just reading, writing and arithmetic, but typing, agriculture and other vocational subjects and those which will help the student survive outside of the classroom," he said.

Thornsberry reported on the rehabilitation law of 1973, covering handicapped persons and granting them a right to equal educational opportunities.

Superintendent Dan Mabe told the board work is progressing on the new high school building although the concrete work is extremely slow.

Mabe said, however, he is well pleased with the work the architects, CTA Architects and Engineers are doing in supervising preliminary phases of the building. He said sub-contractors are now finishing the compaction work at the site and are also doing an excellent job. Workmen expected to begin this week on excavation for the footings for the main high school building, some of which will be 12 feet in depth.

Paving of the parking lots and drive ways will be completed as soon as possible and will serve to keep construction equipment and material out of the mud during the remainder of the project and during winter months, Mabe said.

Mostly fair, slightly cooler

Twin Falls, Northside, Burley—Rupert area:
Mostly fair through Monday. Highs today near 90 and Monday 85 to 90. Overnight lows in the 50s.

Hailey, Camas Prairie, Lower Wood River Valley:
Chance of afternoon or evening thunder showers, otherwise fair through Monday. Highs both days in the 80s. Overnight lows in the 40s.

Synopsis:
Few showers and thundershowers were scattered over Idaho but skys were generally fair and warm Saturday. Temperatures were in the 90s over most of the north and south but the temperatures were in the 80s over the central mountains. Moisture moving northward out of Nevada should scatter some thundershowers over most of southern Idaho through Monday, but activity will be confined mostly to the mountains.

Temperatures will be a little cooler over the entire state with highs in the mid-80s to mid-90s. Overnight lows will continue mostly in the 50s.

The extended outlook Tuesday through Thursday indicates little or no precipitation with highs mostly in the 80s and lows in the 50s.

Million spent on drought

BOISE (UPI)—The Bureau of Reclamation spent more than $1 million on drought aid in Idaho by the end of July, the Department of Interior's Boise office said today.

The Lewiston Orchards Irrigation District received $200,000 to drill a water supply well. The Fremont Madison Irrigation District spent $125,000 for acquisition and installation of equipment to use a Teton project well field complex.

The Idaho Department of Water Resources was allocated $182,000 to provide water for livestock and to tank and transport water.

Canyon Creek Lateral Ditch Waterusers Association spent $240,000 to drill water supply wells and install a pumping plant.

The Idaho Fish and Game Department received $202,000 for supplemental water supply and temporary facility construction at fish hatcheries and for other fish and wildlife relief measures.

Some $125,000 went to the Idaho Bureau of Land Management for improvements on public lands to benefit wildlife and livestock species adversely affected by the drought.

Another $30,000 has been allocated but not obligated to the Reid Canal Co. to construct temporary pumping facilities at its drainage pond.

Congressmen flood Latin America

By United Press International

Latin America is receiving a virtually unprecedented barrage of visits this month from U.S. congressmen and administration officials to explain, affirm and discuss a radically changing policy that is shattering old assumptions about Yankee relations in the hemisphere.

U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young, President Carter's most spectacular diplomat, is touring 10 nations in the Caribbean basin to help foster a spirit of "cooperation and not confrontation" in a region whose proximity to the United States has often caused it to be taken for granted in the past.

Terence Todman, undersecretary of state for Latin America, is making his second underpublicized swing below the Rio Grande, visiting four right-wing dictatorships in the deep south of South America. His hosts are troubled by the Carter administration emphasis on human rights and hostile to sanctions taken against them.

Even more low-key was a trip to El Salvador, Bolivia and Argentina by Patricia Derian, the State Department's coordinator on Human Rights. She returned to Washington after holding quiet talks with government officials, civilian politicians and local social organizations in what appears generally to have been a fact-finding tour.

Allard K. Lowenstein, former New York congressman recently appointed alternate delegate to the United Nations, visited Columbia, Peru and Chile to discuss the human rights situation in those South American countries.

And finally, two groups of congressmen, one from the Senate and one from the House, are visiting eight nations talking with governments and private citizens to get first-hand impressions of a part of the world the executive branch is taking very seriously.

By the end of August, these six sets of visitors will have seen 24 of Latin America's 30 independent nations, blanket coverage unseen in the hemisphere in recent memory. They followed Rosalynn Carter's around the campus "and not as the British propagandists hoped, at the protective cover of innocent children who had been placed in front of the imperialist screen."

More than 32,300 British troops and Ulster police were deployed to protect the queen. The campus was ringed with four miles of barbed wire. Security men said they combed it "literally inch by inch."

Their vigilance was spurred by the IRA warning to the queen, whom they called "Elizabrit," that this would be "your day to remember."

The IRA and its Catholic supporters want Britain to hand it over to an all'Ireland republic. Catholics make up one third of the province's million residents.

TWIN FALLS—The American Association of Retired Persons will hold a meeting Wednesday at 10 a.m. in Sunnyview Courts on Sycamore Street. A pot luck picnic will follow the meeting. Those planning to attend should bring their own table service and choice of food.

Woman held to teaching contract

BUHL—A Buhl school teacher and mother of four small children, Joan Hoy, was told by the school board last week that under present circumstances she will not be released from her teaching contract for the coming year.

Mrs. Hoy, an elementary teacher, attended the meeting accompanied by her husband and four youngsters, and told the board she has moved to Gooding and feels the 40-minute drive every morning including winter travel over Clear Lakes grade may be too much for her to cope with. She said it would be necessary for her to leave home at 7:15 a.m. each day with her four children fed and dressed for a day with the baby-sitter.

She said she has met with the school superintendent in Wendell and has a job there if she wishes it and if she is able to accept it immediately.

The woman said she signed and returned her Buhl contract before she was aware of the family's move to Gooding.

Superintendent Dan Mabe told the board he does not have an applicant available to fill the particular position to his satisfaction at this time. With school opening only about two weeks away, he said, most of the teachers who applied for jobs have found other teaching positions or work in other fields. He said one Buhl woman who had not planned to teach this year may be available and would be satisfactory.

Board members told Mrs. Hoy they would try to have an answer for her by the end of the week, but unless the Buhl woman accepts the job, Mrs. Hoy will have to make good on her contract. Mabe said the Hoy family moved to Gooding in May, but Mrs. Hoy did not contact his office asking to be released from the contract until a few days ago.

"I'm afraid for the present time, we have to tell you the contract is still in force," chairman of the board, Richard Morris told Mrs. Hoy. "If the other teacher accepts the position we will probably release you."

In other business, the school board received insurance bids and will announce an award in the September meeting.

Mabe said Buhl schools will open Aug. 29 with a full day session. Teachers will meet Aug. 22 and principals Aug. 15. General faculty meetings will be Aug. 23. Registration will be Aug. 24 and 25 for junior and senior high students respectively.

South Africa 'scum' proclaims professor

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI)—South Africa "has become the scum of the world community" and the whites give the impression of being "Fascists" and "Nazis," heart transplant pioneer Prof. Christian Barnard said today.

Barnard, speaking at the South African Freedom Foundation's Conference on "Bridge Builders 1977," said his country had made a mistake in the late 1940s by trying to effect social and political separation.

"This was a critical period in the history of the human race," Barnard said. "It was just after World War II and the stench of the Nazi concentration camps was still fresh in our nostrils.

"Yet we come along and talk about the purity of the white South African. It is no wonder that we are called Nazis, that we are called Fascists because this is the impression that we give the world."

Another mistake made was the "arrogant and ignorant way" in which the government tried to implement its (apartheid) policy. South Africa has become the scum of the world community. Nobody wants to have anything to do with us," Barnard said.

A second speaker, John Barratt, warned against the danger of reacting simplistically to U.S. criticism of South African policies.

Realtor joins company

TWIN FALLS — Robert Cummings is now associated with Western Realty Company, Inc., L. James Koutnik, president, has announced. His specialty has been the organization and development of real estate syndications which own and operate residential properties for profit. In addition, Mr. Cummings has experience in the operation and management of farm and dairy properties. His background, education and experience will add immeasurably to Western Realty's ability to provide a full professional real estate service, Koutnik said.

A native of Burlington, Iowa, Mr. Cummings holds a degree in Business Administration from the University of Iowa and was licensed in real estate in California before moving to Twin Falls with his wife, Marian. His interests include golf, snow skiing and hunting.

Scott promotes three

SUN VALLEY — Scott USA, Sun Valley, Idaho, has announced the promotion of several key personnel. According to James E. Tobin, president, Rodney J. (Pepper) Reese, 33, has been named senior vice president, responsible for general operations of the company, including manufacturing, finance, and administration. Pepper joined Scott in 1972 as controller and has been vice president of administration and most recently vice president of operations. A native of Ketchum and a graduate of Wood River High School, Reese received his BBA from Idaho State University in 1968 and his MBA from the University of Utah in 1969. Prior to joining Scott, he was associated with Morrison-Knudson Co., Inc. in Boise.

David L. Stevens, 32, formerly the controller of Scott, has been named vice president of finance. He joined the company in May 1975 and is a native of Hailey. He received his BBA degree from Idaho State University in 1967 and his MBA from the University of Utah in 1968. Prior to joining Scott, he worked for Honeywell, Inc. in Minnesota for seven years.

William J. Bozzuto, 31, has assumed the position of controller. He has been with the company since July of 1976. Bozzuto grow up in the Shoshone area, graduated from Idaho State University in 1968 and received his CPA certificate in 1971. Prior to joining Scott, he was associated with Arthur Anderson & Company in Portland for eight years.

Reynolds has new boss

TWIN FALLS — Keith M. Kenny has been promoted to manager of Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Center here.

Kenny, a native of Shubert, Neb., has been with Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Company since 1974, starting as a service clerk with the Twin Falls Company recycling facility. He was promoted to the Reynolds Aluminum recycling plant in Pocatello, before moving back to Twin Falls.

Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Center in Twin Falls is located at 349 Maxwell Ave., and is open from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. Reynolds pays 17 cents a pound for all-aluminum beverage cans, and other light household aluminum items.

Utility tells earnings

BOISE — R. D. Grimm, president of Intermountain Gas Company has announced third quarter results for the Company.

The loss for the three months ended June 30, 1977, was $.21 per average share, compared to $.04 loss a year ago. The resultant nine months ended June 30 earnings of $2.32 per average share were down 6¢ from the nine period last year. For the year ended last date earnings were $2.31 compared to $2.81 for 1976.

Grimm noted that the 1976 earnings were restated as a result of an accounting change instituted by Intermountain at October 1, 1976.

In his quarterly letter to the stockholders, to be released August 19, Mr. Grimm recognized the need for a continuing, aggressive customer information program.

He stated that the publicity pertaining to the supply problems east of the Rocky Mountains should be offset in our service area by a program "designed to clarify our excellent supply position in the marketplace."

Forest accepting bids

BOISE (UPI) — The Boise National Forest is accepting bids for building materials until Sept. 8, the Boise office said today.

The Lunch Creek and Whitehawk Creek bridges require timber and hardware. The materials must be delivered 60 days after the contract is awarded.

Lumber, metal trailer skirting and insulation, metal roofing and other building materials are needed by the Lowman Ranger District. Delivery time also is 60 days after the award of the contracts.

Further information is available from contract specialist Jim O'Daniel at the forest office in Boise.

Loan rates jolt stocks

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks, jolted by a continuing trend of higher interest rates, were lower at the close of the New York Stock Exchange Friday. An earlier rally fizzled. Trading was moderate.

The Dow Jones industrial average was off 6.15 points to 871.28 shortly before the NYSE close. It had been down nearly six points at the outset and only about a point shortly after noon. The Dow plunged 9.61 points Thursday to a 19-month low.

Declines outnumbered advances by about a two-to-one margin among the 1,823 issues crossing the composite tape.

New York Stock Exchange turnover amounted to about 17,000,000 shares, down from the 21,740,000 traded Thursday.

Prices were lower in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange issues.

Analysts said the Federal Reserve Board, struggling the past two months to counter an inflationary surge in the money supply, tightened credit again Thursday.

The basic money supply rose $700 million in the latest week and many analysts predicted higher interest rates. They also predicted the Fed would raise the discount rate if charges member banks on loans.

Published reports that a leading Wall Street analyst had downgraded the automobile earnings hurt the Dow average and the rest of the market overall.

General Motors, a Dow average component, plunged 1⅜ to a 1977 low Thursday. Ford and Chrysler were lower most of the day in active trading. Chrysler also is a Dow average component.

Johns-Manville, another Dow average component, was sharply lower at one point. The company said the continuation of a strike at its Defiance, Ohio, fiber glass plant could materially affect 1977 earnings.

Commonwealth Edison was active because of a block of 265,000 shares at 30½.

Babcock & Wilcox was sharply higher after a delayed opening. J. Ray McDermott, which Tuesday denied it was making a bid, offered $55 a share for B&W stock. B&W officers rejected McDermott's offer. They already have been fighting a $48-a-share bid by United Technologies. McDermott and UT both were lower.

Tropicana Products was sharply lower after a delayed opening and Kellogg was higher. Late Thursday, Kellogg and Tropicana called off a proposed merger. It was the third time in three years the companies failed to conclude a merger proposal.

Technicare was lower after a delayed opening. Company officials said they knew of no reason for the activity in the stock.

Cadence Industries lost ground after reporting a second-quarter operating loss.

Investors groups distribute income

TWIN FALLS — Two Investors Group mutual funds — Investors Stock Fund, Inc. and IDS Growth Fund, Inc., Minneapolis, Minn., have declared distributions payable July 29 to shareholders of record July 28.

Investors Stock Fund, Inc. has declared a record distribution of 18.50 cents per share for its 1977 third fiscal quarter. The distribution is derived exclusively from dividend and interest income.

The current IDS Growth Fund distribution amounts to approximately $1,554,000 and will be automatically reinvested in the accounts of about 36,800 planholders of the IDS Investment Program (IIP). Investors may purchase shares in IDS Growth Fund only through IIP, a contractual plan. IDS Growth Fund is designed for capital growth and invests primarily in stocks and securities convertible into common stocks.

The funds are two for which Investors Diversified Services (IDS) provides investment advisory and distribution services, according to L.T. Dolphin local representative.

Inventor-dealer

INVENTOR and producer of the unique Aqua-TRON water softener, Frank Kreger, Dodge City, Kans., explains the unit to Sharon Triplett, Hansen, distributor in the local area. The unit softens water without using electricity, salt or chemicals and even cleans out corroded pipes and appliances.

New water softener available locally

TWIN FALLS — Aqua-TRON a new concept in water softeners which provides soft water without the use of electricity, salt or chemicals is being made available to Magic Valley residents.

Frank Kreger, president of Aqua Electronics Inc., Dodge City, Kans., who designed and developed the unique system said in Twin Falls this week, the unit, Aqua-TRON, carries a five year guarantee. It will handle all hot and cold water service in the home or business and will improve plant life by about 30 per cent, according to tests.

Kreger said the systems in the Aqua-TRON ionize the minerals causing hardness and scaling (calcium and magnesium with iron) electronically as the system creates its own charge and the water and minerals pass through the Polar-Tron energizer.

The unit will keep water stains and spots from developing and will even rid water pipes, appliances, sinks, toilets and other home equipment or the mineral deposits built up from the use of hard water. A hot water heater, for example, will over a period of time clear out all collections of such deposits if the Aqua-TRON is attached to a home water supply. Dishwashers will also rid themselves of corrosion through the use of the soft water from the unit.

The water is similar to distilled water or pure spring water as most of the chlorination and flouridation will also be removed.

Kreger said he designed the unit after working with people in an effort to solve their problems about hard water use. It is the only unit of its type in the United States, Kreger said and is already being marketed in some dozen states including Washington and Nevada.

Sharon R. Triplett, Hansen, will be representative for the company in Southern Idaho. Interested home or business owners may contact her at 423-4620 for price quotations and other information.

Maintenance and servicing is much less with the Aqua-TRON, Mr. Triplett said, but experts are available to install and service the units.

The units are popular with motels and similar businesses because there is no need for cleaning wash basins, sinks and toilets with harsh cleaners and chemicals, Mrs. Triplett said.

Although the Aqua-TRON carries a five year guarantee, it lasts indefinately, Kreger said, and will enhance the value of any home. It is not possible to take the unit when moving from one home to another, however.

Mrs. Triplett is also representative for the Hurley water purifier which is a portable unit and removes all impurities from domestic water supplies.

Aqua-TRON, which sells for $595 in the domestic size, will be featured in th Twin Falls Parade of Homes shown by Raintree Enterprises Inc., Lyle Frazier, president. The Parade of Homes will be held late this month featuring new homes and building designs in several areas of Twin Falls.

Continental Life posts net gains

BOISE (UPI) — Continental Life & Accident Co. posted a profit of more than one-half million dollars during the first six months of the current calendar year, according to Board Chairman William H. Langroise.

Unconsolidated net gain from operations for the period ended June 30 was $502,000, he said, compared with $168,000 for the same period a year earlier.

LESLIE THOMPSON, branch manager of Stout Realty, Jerome has been awarded the Stout Master Salesman Award for outstanding achievement in sales and service. He has been a broker since 1967 and in the real estate business since 1957. Since 1973 he has represented Stout in the Jerome area.

Lewiston ships 30% more grain

LEWISTON, Idaho (UPI) — A half a million tons of grain have traveled from the Port of Lewiston via barge on the Snake-Columbia river system during the second year of operation of the so-called "new northwest passage."

Lewiston Port Manager Carl Moore said grain shipments began on Aug. 8, 1975.

He added this year's figures represent a 30 per cent increase over the first year.

The shipments include hard red wheat from Montana and the Dakotas.

If you (or your company) sell products, goods or services to the farmers in Magic Valley . . . . this is for you!

COMING SOON! A SPECIAL EDITION OF THE TIMES-NEWS

Fall Harvest

Ever since Idaho's first settlers grubbed a few hard-earned acres from the sagebrush desert, agriculture has been Magic Valley's meat and potatoes.

Throughout the valley's history, hard-working farmers have done the most to shape the growth and prosperity of the area.

Valley farmers, their annual production and their consumption of other goods, make up more than two-thirds of the area economy. Without the farm dollar in Magic Valley, the merchant would be left in the dust.

Many technological advances have brought change to the farming industry, better tractors, better combines, more productive breeds of plants and advanced cultural practices have all combined to change the face of agriculture in the valley over the years.

At the heart of Magic Valley's tremendous productive capacity, however, still stands that man whose hard work and perseverance has made it all possible — the Magic Valley farmer.

The Times-News salutes all Magic Valley farmers — the backbone of the area's economy.

Bellevue water needs boiling

BELLEVUE — Residents of Bellevue should continue boiling their drinking water until results of a Health Department tests are returned to the city.

The State Department of Health and Welfare Friday announced "high bacteria counts" had been found in Bellevue's city water supply which could cause "flu-like symptoms" in those who drink the water.

Department officials recommended the 900 people who depend upon the city water supply should boil it before drinking.

Since Friday, according to Bellevue Mayor L.T. "Pete" Johnson, the source of the contamination has been found and stopped.

"I think it's all right now," Johnson said. "An irrigation dam was leaking and running down over one of our pick-up lines. The water was saturating through the ground into the line."

Johnson says the owner of the dam has now repaired the leak and the water should return to a safe level of bacteria count within "two days."

"I think it is all cleared up," the mayor says, "It's been two days."

Johnson says residents should continue to boil their drinking water until results of the department's most recent tests of the water have been returned to the city.

Wendell man charged

WENDELL — A 22-year-old Wendell man has been arraigned in Blackfoot on first degree murder charges in connection with the death of Kurt Cornelison, 18, last July 24.

Robin James LePage, 22, who was first arrested in Gooding County on July 19, and charged with committion 14 burglaries in Wendell in a single night, was then sent to the State Hospital in Blackfoot for psychiatric evaluation but escaped.

He was ordered held in the Blackfoot jail without bail following his arrest on the murder charge a few days later.

The court appointed Dwight Baker, Blackfoot to represent him. A preliminary hearing on the murder charge issued for Aug. 18 at 9:15 a.m.

Blackfoot authorities said in addition to the shooting death of Cornelison, LePage is charged with two counts of second degree burglary involving frauds taken from Spudnik Equipment Co., and one count of grand larceny for the alleged theft of a pickup truck from Valley Equipment Co., the day prior to the murder.

Cornelison was killed in Riverside near Blackfoot on the morning following the thefts and the day after LePage and a 15-year-old companion escaped from the hospital in Blackfoot.

Court officials in Gooding had sent LePage to Blackfoot for psychiatric evaluation after he pleaded innocent to burglary charges by reason of mental illness. He was arrested in Hagerman and charged with a total of 19 Gooding County burglaries, including the 14 in Wendell.

'Pop top' chain a long one

TWIN FALLS — Somebody drank a lot of beer or soft drinks.

And three Twin Falls young people had to be careful not to cut their fingers as they made a half-block-long chain out of the "pop top" tabs gathered up by "Mr. Jewell," a neighbor of the youths.

They made the chain, which is about half a block long, from tabs given to them by a neighbor man who collected all 2,661 of them.

"He gave them to us and we hooked them together," Kevin Hamilton, spokesman for the group, said.

Asked what they planned to do with the chain, young Hamilton said, "It fell apart and we each took a piece of it for a souvenir."

He said his brother wants to take both his and Kevin's and hang them on the wall of his room.

Young Hamilton said the three are "talking about" making another, longer chain.

He said he figures the chain would be worth "dollar or two" at the recycling center in Twin Falls.

LaRee, 13, helped the two younger Hamilton brothers string the 'pop tops'. Kevin, 9, and Jeff, 6, live at 279 Monroe in Twin Falls. LaRee lives across the street.

Slalom start successful

RIDING A single ski from the dock, this Magic Valley water skier takes off at Murtaugh Lake. The lake is one of the most popular water skiing areas in Twin Falls County. County Commissioners in Twin Falls have been working with the Bureau of Land Management to obtain land around the lake for an eventual overall recreation development.

In addition to water skiing, the area is a popular fishing spot. Plans call for the construction of picnic tables, with covers similar to those at Salmon Dam, boat docks and landscaping.

This week the county opened bids for gravel to improve the main road into and around the lake. Twin Falls Construction Co., with a bid of $6,919.44 submitted the low bid. Others included Winn Construction, $6,954.25, and Kloepfer Construction, $9,961.

County officials hope to gravel the road to the lake yet this fall. Other improvements will follow as funds are available. The Bureau of Land Management is working with the county in the over-all program.

Evel's insurance didn't cover riots after jump

TWIN FALLS — An insurance policy purchased by motorcycle daredevil, Evel Knievel prior to his Snake River Canyon Jump in 1974 did not cover damages caused when a group of his fans rioted and destroyed concession stands and beer trucks.

Fifth District Judge James M. Cunningham, in a "findings of facts and conclusions of law" has concluded the Knievel policy excluded any liability for injury or damages resulting from "riots, civil commotions or mob action."

The findings were issued in a case brought by Foremost Insurance Co. against Evel Knievel and his Snake River Enterprises Inc., and concessioners, Bob Crandall, Harold Putzier, Antonio R. Guanche, O. K. Swenson, Darrell Clark, the Twin Falls Jaycees, C. T. Qualls and Marion Swenson.

All ha d filed claims with foremost Insurance for damages resulting from the riot which followed Knievel's abortive canyon jump.

When free beer ran out at the jump site, the mob tore up and burned concession stands and turned over and broke open beer trucks — near the jump side.

Before issuing a permit for the jump, the county required liability insurance.

Knievel purchased the insurance from Foremost Insurance Co. for $9,600. A clause in the policy, however, excluded damage as a result of mob action.

In his findings, Judge Cunningham said the plaintiff, (Foremost Insurance) has an obligation to pay attorney fees to May, May, Sudweeks and Fuller, and attorney James P. Jones, representing Knievel and Snake River Canyon Enterprises in a myriad of cross claims and amended cross claims in connection with the Knievel jump.

Two Twin Falls men, Bob Crandall and Harold Putzier, earlier brought action against Knievel and Foremost Insurance seeking $10,000 in damages and $20,000 for punitive damages.

Swensons lost about 124 chemical toilets in the riot and fire and the Twin Falls Jaycees lost about $5,000 in beer when a truck was broken open and the beer stolen.

Scientist says 'yes'

Fertilizer from plant?

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

GOODING — Dr. Louis York, an environmentalist for Stearns-Rogers, Engineering Co., Denver, Colo., says a coal-fired electrial generating plant at Bliss could bring the area a "free gift of fertilizers" in the way of nitrogen oxides.

Speaking to the Gooding Rotary Friday, York said the process of the plant would have the same effect as lightning in the air which disolves the nitrogen oxide for plant benefit.

"Our experience in the past has been that where the generating plants are located, plant life does very well," he said.

Dr. York said when the Idaho Public Utilities Commission approved a coal-fired plant for Idaho Power, his firm was asked to prepare a design.

"My job was to study the environmental aspects of such a plant and this is my field," he said.

Dr. York said he sees no reason for concern about gases, smoke, chemical discharge or other environmental pollutants from a coal-fired generating plant.

Dr. York said his firm determined 15 sites in southern Idaho, suitable for a coal-fired plant with no "unacceptable" effects on the surrounding area.

Some, he said, would be less desirable on an economic basis because of costs of building and operation. In the end, he said the three most acceptable sites proved to be one near Bliss, another near American Falls and the third at Sid's Crossing in Lincoln County.

He said the 500 megawatt plant is committed to installation of "scrubbers" which would remove sulphur dioxide. Dr. York said he believes the plant could operate safely with low pollutant levels even without the scrubbers.

The Stearns-Rogers firm designed the proposed Pioneer Plant for Idaho Power and many others throughout the country. Dr. York said Idaho is the only state in the nation that does not have a coal-fired generating plant.

During cold weather, Dr. York said, there would be visible plant emissons in the form of steam.

"Otherwise about all you could see would be heat waves in the air above the smoke stacks," he said.

He said water requirements to operate the plant are not yet fully determined and the design is not complete.

"I would say the plant could use as much as 15 cubic feet of water (per second) when operating at full load.

However, the plant would not operate at full load at all times and it would use and reuse the same water several times before it was finally discharged as waste," Dr. York said.

Dr. York said a coal-fired plant's output of ash, which he said is simply the soil which coal contains, would be available to anyone or individual who wished to make a beneficial use of it, but otherwise would be buried as a plant waste.

"Actually, it would be good for use as a soil conditioner, especially where the soil contains a lot of clay," he said. "It would probably take about 100 acres for a disposal site for the ash collected from the plant, he said.

Asked if it could be used for the manufacture of cinder blocks, Dr. York says it could but the plant's ash production in one month would be enough for all the cinder blocks Idaho would need in a year.

Asked about use of natural hot water in the Bliss area as an alternative to the plant, Dr. York said this is probably not available in quantities to meet power needs.

"It would be very valuable as a power saver. It could be used to heat the homes in your community and save electrical energy, but I don't believe it is available in quantities which could be considered as an alternate power source," he said.

Robert Fields, Gooding, chairman of a group supporting location of the plant in Gooding County, introduced the speaker.

Solzhenitsyn 'unpopular' in Soviet Union

JEROME — Ernest Hemingway is a popular author in the Soviet Union but Alexander Solzhenitsyn isn't, according to a young Soviet agriculture specialist visiting Magic Valley.

Vasili V. Zubkoff, 25, is a guest of the Dick Marshall family in Jerome and is one of 14 Soviet agriculturalists touring the U.S. this summer as part of an international 4-H exchange program.

Zubkoff told the Times-News dissident Soviet novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn, who now lives in exile in Vermont, is not entirely liked by Soviet readers.

The young farm specialist said he personally didn't like Solzhenitsyn's writings.

"I don't like him because he sometimes writes things that aren't true," Zubkoff said. "If you don't know our country you can think all the things he writes are true."

However, Zubkoff noted a number of American authors, including Ernest Hemingway, are still popular in the Soviet Union.

Jack London, Mark Twain, and more recently, Alex Halley, are among the American authors with wide readership, he said.

Neither Zubkoff or Alexander V. Klotchoff, a second Soviet farm specialist staying in Kimberly with the Ron Ballard family, were anxious to talk about Soviet politics — and said they would rather talk about farming.

The young Soviets say there are both similarities and differences in the methods their country and the United States use to farm.

Idaho judicial salaries termed 'too low'

In California, judges make twice as much

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

BOISE — In California, a state Supreme Court justice earns $62,025 a year.

An Idaho Supreme Court judge gets half that much $31,500.

A New York District Court Judge gets paid $48,998. An Idaho District Judge gets $20,000 a year less at $28,500.

Idaho has earned the dubious distinction of paying its District and Supreme Court judges less than any other state but one.

And members of Idaho's legal profession on both sides of the courtroom worry state judicial salaries now are not high enough to attract enough experienced applicants for judicial vacancies.

In recent years, several Idaho judges have resigned their positions primarily because they could earn more in private practice.

In his State of The Judiciary Message delivered July 7, Idaho Supreme Court Chief Justice Joseph J. McFadden stated, "Unless a pay raise is forthcoming, by this time next year Idaho will have the distinction of paying its District Judges and Supreme Court Justices the lowest salaries in the nation.

"Within the state, we are beginning to see resignations from the district court, and a lack of applicants when there are judicial openings in the district court, which retards the Judicial Council's ability to send to the Governor the names of many of the best qualified individuals available for judicial service.

"Judicial salaries, particularly at the trial court level, simply are not high enough to attract substantial numbers of applicants for judicial vacancies."

In the past session of the Idaho legislature, a bill to increase the salaries of Supreme Court justices by $3,000 to $34,500 and of District Court judges by $2,500 to $31,000 passed in the Senate but died in committee in the House.

The last major salary raise for Idaho judges came in 1974 when the state legislature upped the Supreme Court salaries set in 1970 from $20,000 to $25,000 and the same District Court salaries from $22,000 to $27,000.

Idaho legislators view the situation from different positions. All express a concern for the quality of Idaho's judiciary, and some feel strongly a significant salary increase is needed to preserve it. But, many do not feel it is presently endangered because of low salaries.

Those legislators who oppose a sizeable salary increase for Idaho's judges — and these legislators seem to have wielded considerable power because in the past 12 years there have been only five raises — argue the salary level does not affect judicial quality and they claim the legislature has been fair in granting judicial pay raises.

Glenns Ferry Republican Sen. J. Wilson Steen, Senate assistant majority leader, contends Idaho judges receive certain "fringe benefits" in the form of job security, prestige and retirement programs which offset the comparatively low salaries.

"I think the position and the prestige is weighed against the actual dollar earnings," Steen observed.

However, other legislators like Pocatello Democrat Rep. Patty McDermott, who is the only attorney in the House, disagree.

"You can't send your child to college on prestige and honor," McDermott stated pointedly. "You can't buy groceries on prestige."

McDermott observed the legislature in general is unsympathetic to the needs and unimpressed with the importance of the judicial process. She indicated there were only three attorneys in last year's legislature and that most of the state legislators tended to be from farming and ranching backgrounds. In caucus, she complained there is always a preoccupation with percentage increases, rather than a true consideration of what increase is needed.

If this is so, the percentage increases granted for judicial salary raises have not been enough to keep pace with the leapfrogging cost of living in recent years.

Over the four-year period from 1970 to 1974, Supreme Court salaries increased by 20 per cent and District Court salaries increased by 23 per cent.

But during the same period, the cost of living ballooned up 24.8 per cent. And figures from the Bureau of Vital Statistics show the per capita income increase in Idaho jumped up 55.8 per cent from 1969 to 1974.

The view to the future is generally gloomy among members of the Idaho legal profession. They say a substantial increase — considerably larger than the approximately $3,000 increase turned down by this years legislature — is needed to bridge the huge gap between the salaries of Idaho judges and judges in other states and between the salaries of Idaho judges and private attorneys in the state who might consider sitting on the bench if the salary cut that goes along with the position wasn't so great.

The judges say any qualified and experienced attorney today can hope to make $50,000 and upwards in a private practice. Consequently, an experienced attorney wishing to sit on the bench must be ready often to take a salary cut of $20,000 or more each year.

Judges and attorneys don't realistically expect judicial salaries will ever be able to match private salaries, but they do hope they can perhaps move a little closer to each other.

Don Burnett, an attorney and the director of the Idaho Judicial Council, remarked, "I don't think that the public sector can match the highest bracket of the private sector dollar to dollar. But it is necessary to try to close the gap to a sufficient extent that the gap is bridgeable; so if there is someone interested in bridging the gap he can do it for public service and won't be dissuaded."

Burnett points out the difficulty in trying to convince the legislature an intangible factor like quality plays an important role in the overall judicial process.

"One thing about the judicial system is that it doesn't fall apart overnight," he says, "and that almost makes it more difficult to see the problem. The courthouse is still there and the judge too, but you don't see the deterioration. It's hard to generate support to spend money. We're spending for quality and it's hard to show that to people as a tangible commodity."

It's perfectly conceivable Idaho could fill every judicial position with somebody for $10,000 a year, Boise Attorney Ron Kull, executive director of the Idaho State Bar, says. But the quality of the courts would be undermined, Kull adds.

"Money is the sole answer," Kull says about how to check the erosion of quality in Idaho's courts. And he adds, "We ought to have the best legal minds on the bench, and let's face it, brains cost money."

The judges further stoke the fire of their argument by pointing to recent judicial openings throughout the state and the often poor numbers of applicants for the jobs. Traditionally a position of honor and prestige, applicants for positions on the bench seem to have dwindled in recent years.

During the period from 1973 to November 1976, positions opened up for five district judges and the number of applicants ranged from five to nine people in each case. In many of these cases, only a handful of lawyers applied for the openings.

Justice McFadden pointed out that in the most recent district judge vacancies in the Third, Fourth and Fifth Judicial Districts, aside from the magistrates who applied, only a total of four practicing attorneys applied for all four of the vacancies.

Possibly a further symptom of what some would call a chronic illness affecting Idaho's judicial system, is witnessed in the resignations of several District Court judges, a few of whom openly admit salary considerations prompted their actions.

United States District Judge Marion Callister in Boise is one such person. In 1975 Callister left his job as a judge making $27,000 a year in Idaho's Third Judicial District to become the U.S. Attorney in Idaho for a year and today he earns $54,500 a year as a judge with the U.S. District Court.

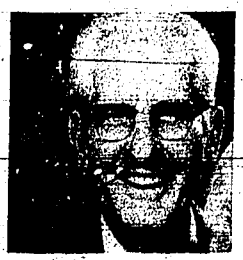

"Salary was my sole reason for leaving," Callister said. "I enjoyed the work as a district judge and any other problems I felt were within the area of things that could be worked out . . . But I just felt the salary was inadequate and there was no way I could educate and provide for my family the way I wanted to."

Callister suggests low salaries will affect Idaho's judiciary in two ways: First, more judges will seek early retirement, leaving Idaho to pay retirement benefits to one judge while also shelling out a full salary to another. Second, younger and less experienced people will be applying for judgeships.

Despite the urgency and concern of the judges and lawyers in their warnings, all admit if the quality of Idaho's judiciary is eroding, it won't become evident overnight. In such case, time will be the judge.

Church sees effort against compromise

SEN. FRANK CHURCH
. . sees sabotage effort in Gospel Hump area

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Frank Church said Friday that an "obvious effort" is being made to "sabotage" the compromise on the Gospel Hump area near Grangeville worked out by environmentalists and multiple-use advocates.

That compromise is the basis for legislation that Church has sponsored in the Senate with Idaho's Republican Senator, James McClure.

However, the compromise has been criticized recently by Rep. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, and his administrative aide Bob Smith, who has taken part in hearings held recently on the issue.

The compromise was reached July 14 after months of negotiations. It provides that:

-About 220,000 acres of high-alpine regions in the Gospel Hump area and along the north canyon wall of the Snake River would be added to the National Wilderness System.

-About 45,000 acres of heavily forested lands next to the wilderness area, accessible by existing roads, would be scheduled for timber harvest and development.

-Another 78,000 acres would become available for development under a comprehensive four-year resource development plan.

-A seven member advisory committee would be set up in the Department of Agriculture to advise the Secretary on the development of areas covered under the resource development plan.

-The Agriculture Secretary would be authorized to work with Idaho and the Department of the Interior to conduct a fish and wildlife research program in the area and surrounding federal lands.

-Within 30 days of passage of the bill, timber in the 123,000 acres scheduled for development will be returned to the annual allowable cut calculations for the Nez Perce National Forest.

Church said that the compromise proposal is supported by the Grangeville City Council and Chamber of Commerce, the Grangeville League of Women Voters, The Idaho County Board of Commissioners, the Cottonwood Chamber of Commerce, Governor John Evans and the Department of Agriculture.

However, since the terms of the compromise were announced, there has been some vociferous local opposition. Church was hanged in effigy at a recent meeting in Grangeville and a Grangeville newspaper has reported that threats have been made against the lives of certain residents.

Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: You were wrong when you told that wife who said her husband's "mistress" was a set of golf clubs to consider herself lucky and to take up golf, too.

Why should SHE have to take up HIS hobby to be with him? Maybe she doesn't care for golf. Men are selfish. They spend every spare minute with their hobbies while their wives twiddle their thumbs.

I've been reading your column for years, and you still use the same line. A wife once complained because her husband went deer hunting every chance he got, and you said, "Be grateful that he's out hunting DEER and not DEARS!"

Another wife complained because her husband's hobby was cars. And you said, "Consider yourself lucky that your husband's hobby has four wheels instead of two legs!"

Times have changed, Abby. The day when the husband was king, and his wife and children walked three paces behind in respectful silence, is over. Get with it!

MODERN WOMAN

Says Husband Is No Longer King

DEAR WOMAN: GOLF WIDOW'S letter prompted a variety of responses. Read on for a poignant letter from a woman whose ideas on the subject are 180 degrees from yours:

DEAR ABBY: In answer to JEALOUS whose husband's "mistress" was a set of golf clubs: I know exactly how she feels because I was in her position for 38 years. (I finally took up the game myself.)

Last November my golfer died of cancer. During the year he battled the disease he continued to play golf even though he was often in pain. His last outing was sitting in the car from where he could watch a foursome drive on his favorite hole.

His ashes were spread by our children on a certain hole at the point where his drives usually came to rest. Now I miss his practice shots in our yard; and our dog longs to shag those shots again.

Abby, please tell those "golf widows" that there are worse hang-ups than a passion for golf.

"REAL" GOLF WIDOW

DEAR GOLF WIDOW: Well said.

DEAR ABBY: I am a perfectly normal, happily married, 48-year-old woman with a problem I've never seen in your column. On numerous occasions I have been made to feel like a dummy or some kind of oddball because I don't drive a car.

Twice I tried to learn, but gave up because I lack the confidence to drive alone. Two driving instructors told me that not everyone should drive a car.

My problem is how to respond when people say, "Any idiot can learn to drive. What's wrong with you? You should be ashamed of yourself!"

Abby, are there others with this problem, or am I an oddball who really should be ashamed of myself?

DOESN'T DRIVE

DEAR DOESN'T: Cheer up. You belong to a large club. Don't worry about responding to insensitive clods who deserve to be ignored. How much safer our streets and highways would be if everyone who shouldn't drive didn't!

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—

In the past 15 years I've acquired a very protruding stomach, above the belt so it's not a pot belly. I'm not fat anywhere else. I'm in my 60s and am 25 to 30 pounds overweight and it's all right there in front — very unsightly. It draws comment and seems to be getting more noticeable.

I don't eat sweets, desserts, starchy or greasy foods and no second helpings. I have a cocktail at night. I exercise each morning for 15 minutes and sleep about eight hours a night. I move about on my job a good bit and sit maybe a third of the time. Any suggestions as to cause and cure would be appreciated. Would isometric exercise help?

Dear Reader—

It may seem unkind but the exercise you probably need the most is that famous one of pushing away from the table.

By your own admission you are 25 to 30 pounds overweight. You can't really expect to solve your problems without reducing your obesity. That means less food and more physical activity. Calories are calories regardless of what type of food you eat. You can help control calories by limiting the sweets, starches, and fats in your diet. There are a lot of hidden fats, in meats, rolls and other foods. Alcohol contains a lot of calories, too, almost as many as fat.

Exercises won't do much for you unless you really get rid of the excess fat. You can't compress fat by developing stronger muscles.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-7, Girth Control: Avoiding The Big Middle. You can do the situp exercises. Lifting your shoulders off the floor and holding that position a few seconds in a modified isometric exercise will help to strengthen the upper abdominal muscles. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. But remember you can't really spot reduce. You need to be on a general reducing diet—a sound one, not a crash diet—and a general exercise program. In time that will produce results for you. Walking regularly is a good exercise for those past middle age who are not able to do the things they once did and it will help prevent an increased girth—from a bulge above the belt or below the belt.

Dear Dr. Lamb—

I am writing to inquire what bad effect, if any, would result from taking a daily dose of 100 milligrams of nicotinic acid.

Dear Reader—

Probably won't do any good, won't do any harm. Adults need as much as 20 milligrams of niacin (nicotinic acid) daily to meet the Recommended Daily Dietary Allowance. It is a water-soluble vitamin and excess amounts are eliminated from the body.

Very large doses of 1500 to 6000 milligrams are sometimes used to lower cholesterol and blood fat levels. In these amounts it overwhelms the elimination process and can cause problems. These include flushing of the skin, irritation of the skin, itching and even interference with normal liver function. This can even cause jaundice. Anyone taking these larger amounts of niacin should only do so under a doctor's direction as important side effects can occur.

Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

STORM DRAIN BACKS UP SENDING RUNOFF, COMPLETE WITH CAR OIL AND DIRT, DOWN AUSTIN STREET . . . Noel Kreft and his neighbors are in low area and water ends up in their yards.

Soggy Twin Falls problem

Inadequate drains cause havoc

BY BOB ZUCKERMAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Noel Kreft is a Twin Falls man with a soggy problem, a problem he would like someone else to help him solve.

Trouble is he's tried everyone he can think of, and they all point the finger at somebody else, Kreft says.

The problem is rain. Almost whenever the clouds drop their moisture on the city, Kreft's place gets more than its share.

Everytime it rains hard, a city storm drain which collects water from the recently re-paved and widened Second Avenue West backs up, sending street runoff complete with car oil and dirt down Kreft's street, Austin.

Because his home and his neighbors' are in low areas, the water ends up in their yards. One neighbor, Mrs. Stella Cox, has it worse than Kreft. When the water comes down their street, it floods her basement.

Kreft has filed a notice of claim with the city, seeking $100 in damages caused by the last flood.

City Manager Jean Millar says the water which floods Kreft's front yard is not a city responsibility.

He says residents in Kreft's part of town, primarily a low-income area, could solve their drainage problems if they were to form a local improvement district and collect funds for street curbs and gutters.

But because some of the residents are too poor and because others "don't give a damn," Kreft says that is out of the question.

Kreft argues the city is responsible for the problem because the widening and repaving of Second has caused more water to flow on his property.

Millar blames the problem in part on the state highway department which, he says, had planned to provide adequate drainage for Second but hasn't yet.

Howard Johnson, chief of the Magic Valley division of the state highway department, says the department had planned to provide adequate drainage to the area as a part of the West Five Points project, a plan to widen and revamp the intersection of Washington Street, Addison Avenue and Second Avenue West near Austin.

However, the West Five Points proposal has been delayed for more than five years, he says, because of a court battle on how much the highway district should pay property owners for nearby land, Johnson says.

Meanwhile, Kreft may do well to wish the drought lasts a little longer.

The city has received federal funding to build sidewalks and gutters on another road in Kreft's part of town, but construction is not expected to begin for months. Millar said. Kreft's insurance company is currently reviewing it, to alleviate any problems Kreft and his neighbors have with rainwater.

As for the notice of claim, Millar says it will probably be denied. If denied, Kreft says, he will seek the money in small claims court.

NOEL KREFT'S YARD FLOODS EVERY TIME IT RAINS . . . wants help to solve his problem

National Women's Conference

Fireworks expected at November meet

United Press International

The big National Women's Conference, ordered by Congress and backed by $5 million in tax funds, will give Texas some fireworks in November.

The Equal Rights Amendment people will battle the stop ERA people.

The two groups also will speak out on opposing sides of woman's right to freedom over her reproductive organs.

That will include the torrid crusade brewing over Uncle Sam's refusal to pay for abortions sought by the poor of the land.

Dr. Kathryn F. Clarenbach, Executive Director of the Conference, made those points during an interview. The Professor of Political Science is on leave from the University of Wisconsin in Madison.

Dr. Clarenbach headed the Wisconsin Commission on the Status of Women and was a founding member of the National Organization for Women.

You may be surprised to hear there's going to be a National Women's Conference—an official one which will report to President Carter and Congress.

You may think decks were cleared of women's issues from coast to coast during the year of observance of International Women's Year.

"A lot of persons thought that," Dr. Clarenbach said. "It just isn't so."

Public Law 94-167, called for the National Conference, stating that it was to be preceded by state meetings, each state electing official delegates to the national gathering starting Nov. 18 in Houston.

"The law," Dr. Clarenbach said, "stated that the purpose of all this would be to bring together the widest possible range of American women to do a number of things."

Among the things:

—To assess the contribution of women to the development of the country.

—To celebrate these contributions.

—To identify barriers that stand in the way of women's full participation in American life.

—To recommend to Congress and President Carter ways of removing those barriers.

—To pay attention to the potential of women in achieving world peace and international understanding.

The law authorized the [illegible] International Women's Year Commission to advise the Administration on matters relating to the appointed [illegible]

Another [illegible] Jean Fairfax, Aileen Hernandez, Mary Eastwood, Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., Ivoma Grace Novick, National Conference Coordinator Sheila Huff, Abzug, from 1971 to 1977, she is vice chair, as "feminists call it," of the National Women's Political Caucus.

More than 100,000 women attended state meetings starting in January. Some 1,442 elected delegates will participate in the National Conference.

The number of [illegible] was computed on the basis of 10 percent plus [illegible] Congressional District in that state.

The kickoff state meetings brought to the surface friction among various female groups over woman issues such as the E.R.A. and abortion and equal opportunity.

Each state group passed resolutions considered necessary to form a more perfect union.

These concerned—in addition to reproductive freedom and E.R.A.—law enforcement, women in power, teen-age pregnancy, older women, students, affirmative action, and much more.

State meetings showed the extreme right was making use of the conferences to build its power, [illegible] and strengths," Dr. Clarenbach said.

Their targets go way beyond the women's issues and the press is slow to realize that this is happening.

"Some unpleasant, rude, racist remarks were made by some of these people trying to take over the meeting.

"In Wisconsin, a young Indian girl was told, 'We don't need any Indians.'

"And a Chicago woman trying to get elected as a delegate was told: 'You should be waiting on tables.'

"These right-wing people seem to be trying to attract more persons to their fold."

"It is sad to see. One of the most apparent things I observed at state meetings was the total dependence of these women on a few leaders telling them when to vote, how to vote."

"In some states, men were sent around to tell the right wing women how to vote."

Besides being against the E.R.A. and abortion on demand, what are the "right wing" people, as Dr. Clarenbach called them, for?

Lindbergh flew over in '27

By THELMA ANNE DEAN
Special to the Times-News

On May 21, 1927, a tall, thin, blond young man electrified the world by flying all alone in a single engine airplane, nonstop, across the Atlantic Ocean from the United States to Paris, France.

The moment he set his plane down in Paris, he was an international hero. This man was Charles A. Lindbergh.

The feat had been tried before by a number of flyers but none had ever been successful. Paris went wild when he landed and when he returned to the United States, the people of our country went wilder — if possible. It was almost a command performance that this young flier, Charles Lindbergh, take his Spirit of St. Louis plane all around the United States to allow the people to see the plane and the man who had been the first to actually attain this goal.

Of course, he couldn't land in every town that wanted to have him but at that time Twin Falls did not have any kind of an airport, anyway. He did fly on to Boise for this celebration and there were many from Twin Falls who went there. Among the people who drove to Boise from Twin Falls were Lionel Dean, Leon Martyn and their wives. The fellows were like most young men of 1927, they were very excited about airplanes and flying them.

Several weeks in advance, we had gotten rooms at a downtown Boise hotel for the night Lindbergh was to be there. And we had gotten tickets for the banquet that was to be held at the Owyhee Hotel.

We drove to Boise in Martyns' brand new automobile. Because it was a very hot day and car radiators could get hot and boil, we had to drive slowly. (Most new car owners at that time were told to drive slowly to break the car in properly.) Therefore, we decided to drive at night. We left Twin Falls at 10 p.m. and around 6 a.m. we arrived in Boise. We went to our hotel where they told us, as you would expect, that at that hour our rooms were not ready, but to come back at 10 a.m. After breakfast we went back to the hotel to find only one room ready. We were all so tired and sleepy by then that the four of us stretched out cross-wise on the bed with our chins hanging over one side of the bed and our feet handing down on the other side. After a nap the fellows went to the airport to see Lindbergh land. At about 3 p.m. their wives started standing in front of the door of the Owhyee Hotel.

The banquet was called for 6 p.m. as I remember. After standing on the sidewalk in the hot sun for three hours, Lionel and Leon joined us and we were among the first to enter. The dinner was held in the Owyhee Hotel lobby. In the early days, the lobbies of hotels were large and could hold many people. Every nook and corner had tables and chairs, people were sitting on one side of the stairway holding plates; the mezzanine was full, just anywhere a person could sit or stand was taken. And there were hundreds of people on the outside who could not get in.

Our wait in the sun had paid off. The main table was in the form of a horseshoe though it had a square end. This end was reserved for dignitaries and Lindbergh. We four sat on the inside of the square immediately across the table from Lindbergh. If you ever saw anyone look like the cat who caught the canary, Lionel and Leon had such a look. Lionel kept saying to me, "Oh, how fortunate can we get by having our seats just across the table from Lindbergh!" He was far too excited, I am sure, to ever remember the three long hours in the sun that I had endured. However, I, too, was very thrilled.

The National Committee, that was in charge of arranging the Lindbergh tour, had scrolls made and personally signed by him. These were to be dropped over cities and towns along his route as a salute from him to them, even though he could not land. Twin Falls was one of the lucky towns to have a scroll dropped.

According to O.A. (Gus) Kelker, Boise, former editor of the Twin Falls Times-News, the Sept. 6, 1927, issue of the then newspaper, The Twin Falls Daily News, had a story that said on Sept. 5, 1927, Charles A. Lindbergh flew over Twin Falls about 1:15 p.m. on his way to Boise to land. He had left Salt Lake City and flown over Twin Falls by way of Ogden, Strevelle and Burley.

The Daily News said a biplane appeared first and then nearly 30 minutes before the Spirit of St. Louis flew over, a monoplane flew over which the town's people at first thought was Lindbergh. However, it was a lead plane for the Spirit of St. Louis and some 20 or 30 minutes later the real Spirit of St. Louis flew over. The story said it was so low as it circled the city that many thought the plane would hit the downtown buildings.

Lindberrgh threw out the scroll. The story was not exact, but it said it "landed on the pavement." The story also said that he was hitting for the Main and Shoshone streets intersection. The story did not say who "caught" the scroll or who "retrieved" it. But, Twin Falls does have the scroll. It is framed and hangs in the office of the Twin Falls City-County Airport manager, where it is a prized possession.

I have heard several times over the years that the scroll was found south of town, but Kelker says the Twin Falls Daily News printed that the scroll "landed on the pavement."

Now, 50 years later, who knows for sure where the scroll landed in Twin Falls that was thrown out of the Spirit of St. Louis by Lucky Lindy, The Lone Eagle? Who retrieved the scroll and where did it land? Who knows? Do you?

If so, please call Lloyd Shewmaker, 423-5795, or the Twin Falls Airport Manager, Harry Merrick, 733-5215.

Lee Hazen of New York, the general counsel of the ACBL and a player who has won 11 major championships, including four Vanderbilt Cups, is also responsible for some of the finest bridge stories.

Sitting West, he elected to open the nine of spades against South's rather normal three-notrump contract. The queen was played from dummy and East followed with the three spot.

A diamond was led and Lee took his ace. In spite of that discouraging three of spades, Lee saw no reason to try another suit. The game was match-points and Lee did not want to help declarer with any problems he might have in hearts and clubs.

He led his eight of spades. The ace was played from dummy and East played the six. Declarer cashed three diamonds while East chucked a couple of clubs. The king of clubs was led next and Lee was on lead once more. He led his last spade!

His partner started to play a card, jumped in shock, put the card back, produced the king of spades, cashed two more spade tricks and apologized to Lee for not seeing the king of spades earlier.

Lee said: "You sure found it at the right time."

A West Virginia reader wants to know if anyone has ever found a conventional meaning for an opening bid of five spades?

It has been used to show a hand such as:

♠ Q J 10 9 8 7 6 5 ♥ A ♦ ♣ A K Q J.

Partner is supposed to bid six with the ace or king of trumps or seven with both, but to ignore high cards in other suits. The trouble with this convention is that after you wait 10 years to get the right hand your partner might forget it.

Women at garage sales faster than bullets

By ERMA BOMBECK

What is faster than a speeding bullet? More powerful than a locomotive? Able to leap tall buildings in a single jump?

Women at garage sales, that's who.

I had to see Garage Power firsthand to believe it. Before moving out of state, I found myself with a few excess trinkets. (Who am I kidding? The attic is so full of junk the county couldn't get the door open to condemn it.)

My girl friend, Esther, said, "You are a natural for a garage sale."

"Why do you say that?" I asked.

"Because you are cheap."

"I don't think you understand," I sniffed, "that spreading one's personal wares out in a garage for public exhibition is not only crass, it smacks of being tacky."

"I made 32 bucks off of my junk," she said.

"Why didn't you say so?" I asked excitedly. "Get the card table and let's get started."

The garage sale began at 9 a.m. By 7:30 a.m., I had 15 cars parked on the driveway, 18 on the lawn, two in a ditch and a Volkswagen trying to parallel park between two andirons in my living room.

They grabbed and bought anything that wasn't pumping water, cemented in the ground, growing from seed or spit sparks at them when touched.

They bought cocktail toothpicks that were billed as "Like new ... radios guaranteed not to play ever ... plastic flowers that had died ... toothless rakes ... buckets with leaks ... books of German military commands ... and a ukulele that only knew one song, "The World Is Waiting For The Sunrise."

At one point I tried to shove through the crowd with a package in my hand. A woman grabbed it from me and said, "I'll give you 35 cents."

"No, really," I stammered. "This isn't ..."

"Forty cents," she said, grabbing it, "and that is my last offer."

It is the first time anyone ever paid me 40 cents for my garbage.

By 4 p.m. I watched tiredly as a woman tried to coax my husband into her trunk.

"Esther," I said, "this is the most incredible sight I have ever seen."

"What's in that package under your arm?" she said.

"It's nothing," I hesitated.

"It's mildewed laundry," she shouted. "How much did you pay for it?"

"Thirty-five cents but some of it still fits."

Christmas ideas put on display

DALLAS (UPI) — Decorations that look good enough to eat may hang from Christmas trees this year.

Miniature radishes, onions and strawberries made from polyester were among the natural design themes at this summer's Christmas gift, jewelry and housewares show at the Dallas Market Center. They are made of cotton fabrics and dotted swiss in traditional red, white and green colors.

Natural colors, designs and themes were more in evidence this year than at previous shows at the Trade Mart, the World Trade Center and Market Hall.

Decorations and decorative accessories, toys and housewares in earth tones, "nature" shapes and with natural ingredients were popular with retail store buyers shopping for holiday merchandise.

Christmas elves designed for hanging or standing were made of wood, dressed in crocheted caps and scarves or wielding wooden spoons and spatulas.

Marine influence showed in housewares designs. One line uses authentic shells and pieces of shells for serving trays and napkin rings. One manufacturer showed serving dishes in clear molded glass.

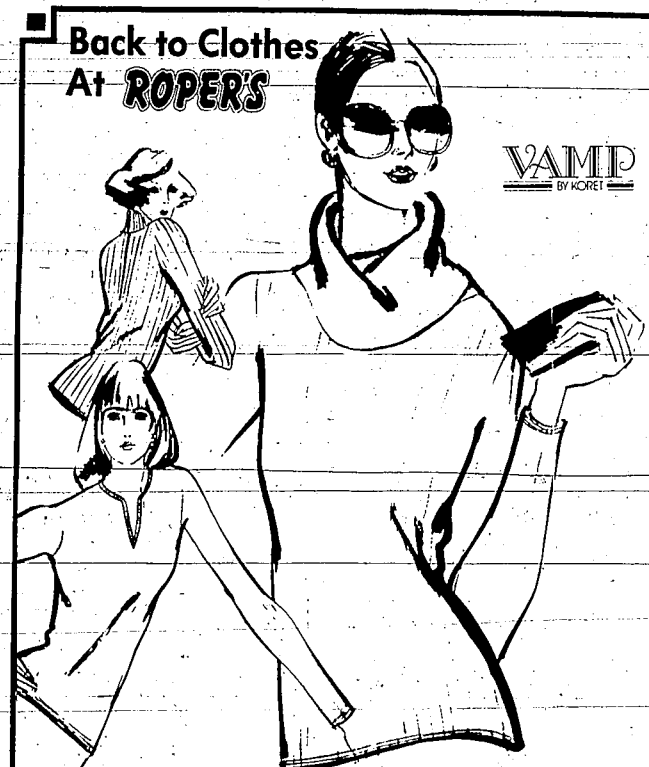

Supper club gets benefit

CINCINNATI (UPI) — A long list of entertainers who have performed in recent years at the ill-fated Beverly Hills Supper Club will appear at a benefit concert Sept. 15, for the children of persons killed in the fire.

Several of the entertainers who will take part in the benefit were at the nearby Southgate, Ky., nightclub on the evening of the blaze — which killed 164 people including television star John Davidson.

The singer's music arranger and conductor, Douglas G. Herro, 27, Los Angeles, was killed in the fire. Davidson was to perform before about 1,200 people at the club's huge Cabaret Room on the night of the fire.

Murder again as Orient Express rolls

LONDON (UPI)—Anyone who thought the glamorous Orient Express chugged its last earlier this year doesn't know about Kenneth Faulkner.

He's even providing a murder.

Faulkner said Wednesday he has hired a whole train from French Railways and will haul 150 passengers in period costume—plus a few possible murderers — from Paris to Istanbul over the new year.

"It should be a great trip," he said in an interview. "At the very least it will be very, very different. Whatever else people have done before on their vacations they've never done anything like this."

The Orient Express began its legendary career in 1883 and gathered more publicity than any train in the world. Writer after writer set books on it, particularly mystery writers like Agatha Christie, whose "Murder on the Orient Express" is perhaps the most famous of the famous train's books.

That, in fact, gave Faulkner one of his ideas.

"All our passengers are supposed to be in 1920s costumes," he said, "and I thought it would add to the atmosphere if we had a little murder aboard."

So Faulkner has hired an amateur dramatic company from north London to ride the train free dressed as race drivers, models, army officers, archeologists, a private detective and a ladies' maid.

"Somewhere in Europe" they'll stage a murder aboard the train. Faulkner said. Then the actors will make themselves available for grilling by the passengers.

As the train shuggs into Istanbul the passenger who has solved the murder will be declared the winner and get his round-trip fare back. It's a considerable fare — $1,320.

"Yes, it's expensive," Faulkner said. "That's one reason why we expect Americans will make up most of the passengers."

Cohabitors entitled to lawyer service

© Chicago Daily News

CHICAGO — Couples who live together without benefit of clergy are now entitled to the services of a lawyer, a panel decided during the American Bar Assn. Convention here.

Since the California Supreme Court ruled that Michelle Triola Marvin could sue actor Lee Marvin for a share of his property, lawyers have a new set of rules for unmarried couples. Stephen Adams, a San Francisco lawyer and a member of the bar convention panel on "nonmarital partners," called the Marvin ruling "the most far-reaching family law case of 1976."

In that case Michelle claimed that during the six years she and Lee lived together, she gave up a budding career to serve as the actor's companion, homemaker and cook and that the pair had an oral agreement to pool their efforts and earnings. The state high court sent the case back to the Los Angeles Supreme Court for trial which is now pending.

Adams said that in the wake of the Marvin ruling, "people are scrambling to write contracts. A singles' bar put up a sign reading, 'notary on duty until 2 a.m.'"

But the San Francisco lawyer cautioned that nonmarital written contracts setting out a separation or property isn't necessarily the answer for nervous males who want to protect their bank accounts. What is known as the "pillow talk" rules might be used by the dependent nonspouse, claiming that the wage-earner professed undying love and support in addition to the contract.

Henry H. Foster Jr., New York University Law professor, predicted problems will arise with oral agreements. "It's an invitation to fraud, his world against hers and vice versa," Foster told the audience of approximately 200 lawyers.

But the panel of family law experts agreed that oral and implied agreements will be recognized in state courts besides California. A Minnesota court has already used the Marvin case in ruling on the dissolution of a 21-year "live-in" arrangement.

Law professor Carol Bruch pointed out there is implied good news for wives too. If Michelle Marvin's homemaking services have a monetary value, than so do the same duties performed by married women.

MARIA DAVILA ... plans rites

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Hilario Davila, Twin Falls, announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Maria Angelita, to Florencio DeLeon.

DeLeon is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonardo DeLeon, Rupert.

Miss Davila is a graduate of Twin Falls High School and attended the College of Southern Idaho.

DeLeon is attending Minidoka High School.

The couple plans an Aug. 27 wedding at St. Edwards Catholic Church, Twin Falls.

Addicts fare better when treated alone

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The conventional wisdom on treating drug-addicted couples says treat them together, let them reinforce each other.

But research by two methadone clinic workers indicates addicted couples reinforce each other's bad habits. The support they provide each other is for destructive behavior. The relationships are based more on "take" than on "give."

"If you treat them together they play games," said Patrick N. Ross, social services supervisor at the Drug Research Clinic in New Orleans.

Methadone is a synthetic, addicting drug with few known negative side effects. It is dispensed in clinics to heroin addicts as a replacement for heroin.

The research, done for completion of master's degrees at Tulane University, was presented at the National Drug Abuse Conference this year and has been offered as a credit course for continuing education students.

Ross and Melba M. Woodward, coauthor of the research report and an employee of the drug clinic, said the chances for good results appear to be better if addicted couples are treated separately.

"To teach them to be productive you have to break up the support system," Mrs. Woodward said. "That doesn't mean our couples end up getting divorced."

But the researchers say addicted couples should have either separate counselors or see the same counselors in separate sessions.

"It would seem that two goals of drug counselors working with addicts should be to help the addicts gain some concept of self and identity and to aid the addicts in recognizing the inconsistencies of their behavior and feelings," they say.

To conduct the research, they tested 16 addicted couples and 16 nonaddicted couples using a compatibility test long accepted in social science research. The addicted couples were found to be more compatible, but not in a healthy way.

"They were more compatible in that they gave each other what they wanted," Mrs. Woodward said. "But what they wanted turned out to be something that supports their lifestyle."

Ross said the theory had been discussed before, but was used rarely in practice.

"It's kind of like the word has been passed from word of mouth, but now it can be read in black and white," Ross said.

Mrs. Woodward said it appears their method has made it easier to work with addicts, but said it's too early to tell about permanent results.

"You have to really give it more time," she said. "Maybe you should ask that question next year. We see people doing things, but next week they may revert and go back to their old patterns."

More jobs offered to '77 graduates

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's the year of the rebound in the job market for college students graduating with new bachelor's degrees.

Offers of employment are up 41 per cent over last year, making 1977 the best year of the decade, the College Placement Council reported today.

The biggest money at the bachelor's level, averaging $1,512 a month, is being offered petroleum engineers. Bachelor's degrees in computer science were drawing an average offer of $1,123 a month.

In last place on the money list are monthly salaries for graduates with bachelor's degrees in the humanities. The average: $810.

Average starting salaries offered accounting graduates came in at $1,052. This specialty, early in the 70s, was near the top of the salary list.

The Placement Council says the latest data on accounting majors "probably can be attributed to the fact that the supply of accountants has caught up with demand."

The College Placement Council's salary survey, now in its 15th year, is based on job offers, not acceptances, made to college students in selected curricula and graduate programs during the normal September-June job recruiting period on campus.

At master's and doctoral levels, recruiting activity also was up. Increases over last year's offers were 43 and 33 per cent, respectively.

Data for the survey comes from 160 colleges and universities. The survey does not keep track of teaching jobs.

One trend of the 70s was reversed in the last year: the percentage of increase in job offers to women with bachelor's degrees was lower than that for men. This is linked to the focus on engineering graduates. Relatively few women tackle engineering.

Other highlights of the survey from the Council based in Bethelehm, Pa.:

— The top master's monthly average was $1,509 for chemical engineers. Second and third on the master's dollar averages was business administration, $1,503, and mechanical engineering, $1,438.

— At the doctoral level, the top dollar monthly average salary, $1,882, was for chemical engineers. Second, $1,811, was for electrical engineering. Doctorates in chemistry were offered an average of $1,725 a month.

Lamaze classes set

TWIN FALLS — The Lamaze Prepared Childbirth classes for couples expecting babies in October and November will begin Aug. 29 and 30.

The seven-week course will run Monday and Tuesday nights from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Lamaze childbirth is for couples who wish to share an informed birth experience, know what to expect during labor and delivery and know how to remain in control of their labor contractions using breathing and relaxation techniques.

Other topics to be discussed include pregnancy comfort, nutrition, anatomy and physiology of normal labor and delivery, nonconforming labor and delivery, medications, hospital experience, feeding the baby and parenting.

The fee for the course is $30 plus $5 deposit on a text. Financial arrangements can be made at the first class meeting.

Couples are requested to preregister as classes are limited and fill up quickly. To preregister, contact the instructor, Joani McFarlane, 423-4742.

Good pears plentiful

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Despite the California drought, the state's Bartlett pear crop is forecast at 329,000 tons this year, or 4,260 carlot equivalents. An industry spokesman says that represents an increase of about 100 carlots over last year.

Pears are shipped green because they do not ripen properly on the tree, the spokesman said. They can be ripened immediately in a [illegible] paper or plastic [illegible] a few days [illegible] one of these [illegible] when it has [illegible] and yields to [illegible] pressure. Don't [illegible]

Open house set

KIMBERLY—Rev. and Mrs. Mel Rayborn will be honored for their 25th wedding anniversary on Sunday, Aug. 21, from 2 to 5 p.m. at their home at 205 Madison St., W., Kimberly.

The couple was married Aug. 22, 1952, at the Church of the Nazarene at Santa Monica, Calif. They currently pastor the Kimberly Church of the Nazarene. Prior to coming here one year ago they pastored churches in California and Washington.

The anniversary observance is being hosted by the couple's four children and family, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Burkhart, Boise; Mr. and Mrs. Jim Lynch, Pomeroy, Wash. and Randy and Ricky Rayborn, Kimberly.

All friends are invited to attend.

Dance program funded

DENVER, Colo.—The Western States Arts Foundation has received $274,600 from the National Endowment for the Arts to be used as one-third funding for the Dance Touring Program in the foundation's 10 state region.

The 1977/78 program will reach approximately 70 communities and will involve 31 professional dance companies participating in a total of 78 weeks of performance residencies in Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming. The total value of this year's program amounts to over $823,000 in direct fees paid to participating dance companies by community sponsors.

Sponsors for the Dance-Touring Program include colleges, universities, arts councils and fine arts centers as well as a broad spectrum of community-based organizations. The $823,000 in fees to companies for the '77-'78 season represents an increase of $114,756 over the fees paid during the '76-'77 season. The 31 companies participating this year will do 161 more weeks of residencies than the 31 companies sponsored last year.

Under the program guidelines, the foundation provides one-third of the dance company's fee to each sponsoring organization.

The length of the individual residencies ranges from two and one-half days to seven weeks. While in residency, the dance companies give public performances as well as conduct workshops, classes, and demonstrations for schools, community groups, dance students and many others.

The Dance Touring Program was begun in the mid-1960s by the National Endowment for the Arts as a way of linking professional dance companies and communities nation-wide in in-depth dance experiences. One-hundred-sixty-seven dance companies are participating in this years' national program as compared to 140 last year. The Denver-based Western States Arts Foundation has coordinated, supplied technical assistance and helped sponsor the Dance Touring Program in the west for four years.

Party-planning advice

There's more to a children's party than fun and games. At least, there should be.

"Youngsters between the ages of 5 and 10 need to learn social behavior outside the discipline of the classroom, the rough-and-tumble playground and the family structure," says Joyce Wills, Hallmark party consultant.

"Encouraging children themselves to plan a party and then serve as host or hostess teaches them new social skills and instills confidence. The relaxed summer months are an excellent time to plan such parties."

The Hallmark consultant offers this advice on creative party-planning:

—Although it may be easier to manage the party yourself, let the child help as much as possible.

—Keep the guest list controlled. One guest more than the child's age is a good rule of thumb.

—Keep refreshments simple and have second helpings available.

—Try a theme party. Richard Scarry characters, the Disney characters and the Peanuts characters from Hallmark are popular with children.

—Keep parties short, two hours or less for ages 5 to 7, two to three hours for ages 7 to 10. Specify party hours on the invitations.

—Keep games short and simple. Have lots of prizes and extra games planned. Make alternate arangements in case of rain.

For specific age groups, here are additional tips:

Age 5—Don't expect much group playing, especially at first. With your child, decide what toys will be left out. Provide individual "warm-up" activities using toys, scissors, magazines and simple puzzles. Have a few games such as musical chairs to work off excess energy. Provide prizes for all. Serve refreshments.

Age 6—Competition, prizes and lots of recognition are the key to these parties. Keep games simple and provide some individual activities such as cutting and pasting designs and coloring. Consider a dress-up party.

Ages 7 to 10—Playtime, refreshments and collection of gifts and prizes is the order of parties during these active year. Let your child make up the guest list (but be sure one member of a Cub Scout troop or one neighborhood child isn't left out), write invitations, suggest activities, decide on refreshments and help with the party budget plans.

Children between 7 and 10 may be given two-party options—a party at home or an outing to a favorite recreation area.

The next meeting is set for Aug. 25 at Sunnyview Courts Recreation Room. The membership committee is in charge of the program.

Foote, Bailey wed

MR. AND MRS. RON BAILEY

JEROME—Penny Foote, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Foote, Jerome, and Ron Bailey were united in marriage in a ceremony at the home of the bride's parents on July 30.

Bailey is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Bailey, Declo.

Bishop Russell Wooley performed the ceremony.

The bride's gown was off-white woven cotton polyester batiste, with a floor-length three-tiered skirt, a stand-up lace collar, long sleeves and a fitted waist line.

She carried a bouquet of blue daisies and white baby's breath.

Witnesses for the ceremony were D.J. Bailey, brother of the bridegroom, and Cathy Foote, sister of the bride.

A reception was held at the bride's parents home after the ceremony.

The wedding cake was blue and white with blue and white daisies.

Guests were seated at quartet tables covered with white table cloths and decorated with brandy snifters with floating daisies.

Clint and Kurt Foote, brothers of the bride, were gift bearers.

Servers were Cathy Foote, sister of the bride, Gwenna Harris, Debbie Reid and Mrs. John Foote, sister-in-law of the bride.

The bride is employed at Juan's College of Hair Design, Twin Falls.

The bridegroom is employed by Jack Thompson, Jerome.

After a wedding trip to Redfish Lake and the Stanley area, the couple will reside in Jerome.

'Irigaray, Jones marry in double-ring ceremony

JEROME—Marty Jo Irigaray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pete Irigaray, Jerome, and Dennis Coy Jones were united in marriage July 9 at the LDS First Ward.

Jones is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Coy Jones, Jerome.

Bishop Terry Lee performed the double ring ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full-length gown of organza. It was fashioned with a high appliqued neckline and a ruffled yoke with overall accents of pink rosebuds. Her short veil of bridal illusion was attached to a beaded headpiece.

The bride carried a bouquet of baby red roses and baby's breath.

Maid of Honor was B.Z. Waite. Bridesmaids included Barbara Goetz and Teresa Jones, sister of the bridegroom.

Shellee Dawn Cutts, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

Danny Hadam, cousin of the bridegroom, was best man and ushers were Benny Walker and Rick Staples.

Karen Hadlock played the wedding music.

A reception followed the ceremony to honor the couple.

Linda Jorgenson registered the guests and Nancy Jorgenson assisted the bride and bridegroom as they opened their gifts.

The bride's table featured a lace skirted cloth over blue and was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bridal couple. It was decorated with blue hearts and lattice work and fresh blue and white carnations were placed between the tiers and encircled the mirror at the base of the cake.

Members of the LDS Relief Society catered and served at the reception.

Judy Cutts, aunt of the bride, hosted a shower.

The bride will continue her studies at Jerome High School this fall.

Jones is a 1977 graduate of Jerome High School and is engaged in farming.

After a wedding trip to Yellowstone National Park, the couple will live in Jerome.

Writing, literature taught through CSI

TWIN FALLS — The Continuing Education Department of Idaho State University will offer two classes at the College of Southern Idaho this fall.

The classes will be taught by Delores Dudley and will carry three credit hours.

Tuesday night from 7 to 10 p.m., a twentieth century literature class will explore modern trends in literature and will address the theme "How Man's Created World Creates Man."

Material to be discussed will include the novel "Zen and the Art of Motorcycle Maintenance" by Pirsig, several short stories including "The Swimmer," "Loneliness of the Long Distance Runner" and "Silent Snow, Secret Snow," poetry of Jeffers, W. Stevens, W.H. Auden and Dylan Thomas.

This class will be discussion oriented.

Thursday nights from 7 to 10 p.m., Proseminar in Writing will explore both expository and creative styles of writing in an effort to merge the structure of expository writing with the spontaneity and flexibility of creative writing.

Students will become familiar with the research process, using gathered material as the basis of selected genres: poetry, essay and short story.

The class will be used not only for criticism but for actual writing and research.

For more information call Marvin Glasscock at CSI or Delores Dudley at 734-3250.

Expert gives basic rules for keeping healthy eyes

NEW YORK—Being able to see is almost as vital as life itself, and in the August issue of Harper's Bazaar, Dr. Robert Reinecke, ophthalmology chairman at Albany Medical College gives the following basic rules to preserve good eyesight:

— A balanced diet is good for your eyes as well as your general health. Extra vitamin supplements, including vitamin A, should not be necessary.

— Protect your eyes against infection by keeping your hands clean. And have a "hands off" policy about sharing bath towels and cosmetics.

— Water works for tired, reddened eyes. (So does sleep!) For relief, wring out a washcloth and use it as a cold compress. Be careful with eyedrops. Unless prescribed by a doctor, they may mask symptoms of real trouble and even cause an allergic reaction in some people.

— Eye exercises performed under a doctor's supervision or according to instruction may be effective for cross-eye or walleye. But exercise to relieve strain—or—improve visual acuity has no proven value.

— Excessive drinking or smoking (including marijuana), can cause bloodshot eyes and limit visual sharpness. Even one or two drinks can interfere with peripheral vision and a few more can cause a squint, double vision and a loss of both depth perception and distance vision.

— Remove all makeup before you go to sleep. If your eyes are infected or inflamed, avoid cosmetics until the condition has cleared up.

Helpful hints

SATISFYING SMUDGE

To achieve a smudged look under the eye, outline half the eye with eyeliner, then, before it dries, use a cotton swab to soften and "smudge" it.

SOFTENED SHAPE

Do you wear glasses and have an angular shaped face? Try wearing rounded frames to soften it.

STRIKING STYLE

If your face can take it and you're looking for a new dramatic hairstyle, think about slicking it all back behind your ears — flat and striking.

MR. AND MRS. ALBERT OSTERKAMP

50th anniversary open house set

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Albert Osterkamp, Twin Falls, will observe their golden wedding anniversary on Sunday, Aug. 21.

The couple was married Sept. 15, 1927, in Holland. They came to America in 1927 and settled in California. In 1942 they moved to Idaho and farmed in Buhl until 1956, where they have resided since that time.

A Mass in their honor will be celebrated at St. Edward's Catholic Church at 1 p.m. A reception will follow from 2 to 4 p.m. in the Parish Hall.

Hosts of the event will be their children, Mrs. Gene (Ann) Klaas, Boise; Ted Osterkamp, Ypsilanti, Mich.; Al Osterkamp, Santa Cruz, Calif., and Louis Osterkamp and Herman Osterkamp, Twin Falls.

The couple has 19 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Friends are invited to attend the Mass and reception. The couple requests no gifts.

Family letters included in book

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Miss Lillian" Carter, who celebrates her 79th birthday Monday, joined the Peace Corps 12 years ago after hearing a TV announcer say "age is no barrier."

Was the family surprised? Not after a lifetime with "Miss Lillian" who was never content to sit home in Plains, Ga., to be your basic grandmother.

Proud, yes. Her son, then seeking the Georgia governorship on the way to the presidency, confessed he was envious.

All of this, and more, is related in "Miss Lillian's" new book — "Away — From — Home: Letters to My Family" (Simon & Schuster, $6.95) which was compiled by her daughter, Gloria Carter Spann.

Mrs. Spann saved the letters, from September, 1966, when the retired nurse from rural Georgia went to Chicago for an orientation course to August, 1968, when she returned, gaunt, tired and changed by what Mrs. Carter called "the most meaningful experience of my life."

The letters run the gamut of human emotions: determination, poignance, humor, anger, hunger and loneliness.

"My going to India strengthened my faith in God and made my relationships with other people take on real meaning," she wrote. "If it weren't for leaving home again, I'd spend the rest of my life in India — I'm still torn between this life and my life there."

A few days after she informed the family, "Miss Lillian" told her daughter:

"Gloria, I guess I'm trapped — all of you seem elated that I'm doing this fool thing! Jimmy thought it was a great idea and said he envied me; Ruth acts as if she's been waiting all her life for me to go just so she'd have an excuse to plan to visit India; Billy is relieved that I've found something to do; and you — you're already looking for a boat since you'll have my pond to fish in all the time I'm gone. Are you all so glad to get rid of me?"

During the training period in Chicago, she had to learn the Indian dialect Marathi. She found out the trainees were being watched by a psychiatrist to determine how they would behave under stress.

"I found out you have to be perfect to be in the Peace Corps," she wrote. "Twice a week, a psychiatrist comes out to eat with us and let us know we're being watched, so we'll stay under a strain. I asked one of the teachers about it, and he said 'We hardly ever de-select anyone. We just make it so tough they de-select themselves.'

"That I damn well know: "I'M STICKING."

During that period (September, 1966), her son lost the Georgia gubernatorial primary. She decided to stop grieving "and just be proud he ran such a wonderful race."

"Oh God," she complained. "This Marathi is so hard. I had to cheer myself up today, so I found a beauty parlor and had my hair done. I told him to make it simple, but he piled it on top of my head. I slipped into the Pub for a martini and the olive helped me to stand the hairdo."

Before being sent off to India, she told her family:

"The psychiatrist said that everything about me is positive, according to the others evaluations of me. Then he said three people think I'm too friendly, to the point that my sincerity is doubtful. He said he thought it was because I was Southern, and that was my natural manner. Frankly, it hurt some, but he finally said, 'Don't try to change your personality, Mrs. Carter, you'd be a mess!'"

She was assigned to a clinic in Godrej Colony about 30 miles from Bombay where she and her roommate, Mabel Yewell, concentrated on family planning, especially vasectomies.

The poverty and deprivation at times were overwhelming. Her homesickness seemed to grow rather than lessen. But her interest in the people kept her going.

"If I had one wish, I would wish for some clean rags, and if I had two wishes, I'd want some cheddar cheese. I'd rather have a chunk of cheese than diamonds."

"I had to visit five families yesterday, all angry people living in one house," she wrote. "They said they won't give children milk, fruit or injections, and they practically forced me out. I just smiled and bowed and said 'Namaste' (Salutations), you damned apes, and left."

"I've felt very deeply against family planning as I first saw it here, but now, I just get mad — seeing little babies as small as mice, no food, no clothes, no nothing."

"We don't advocate the loop anymore — pills, vasectomies and tubectomies only, and one in a thousand women have intellect enough to take pills. One lady told me she solved 'not forgetting' by taking seven on Monday for the whole week."

Some Indian patients who come to the clinic remain haunting and memorable.

One little boy who used to come once a month and never say a word, comes no more and she grieves, knowing he is dead.

Publisher views 'plight' of men

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Elizabeth Forsling Harris, publisher of "Working Woman" magazine, says that women can no longer afford to ignore the "plight" of men.

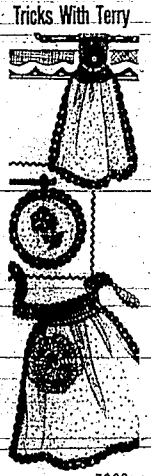

"It's time to help the men. They've been trapped and leaderless since the myth of Prince Charming died. They don't know that his death can make life so much easier for them," Ms. Harris says, adding:

"If we don't begin reaching out to men now — and show them how to share economic responsibilities with the new working woman — the total economic burden may very well take a greater toll on men's life expectancies by the year 2000."

"We want to help the American man learn how to live longer. Now he can become romantic again, without holding back. He needn't fear that the woman he loves will turn into an economic burden.

"As far as the American woman is concerned, our street-fighting, table-pounding stages in the battle for equality are largely over. We now move to the second stage — implementing our economic importance and sharing man's economic burdens."

Woman testifies in court

POCATELLO, Idaho (UPI) — A former neighbor of Jeanne Goodrich testified Friday that Mrs. Goodrich vowed several times to kill her husband Brent to cash in on his $80,000 life insurance policy.

Leslie Jones, Pocatello, who at one time lived in an apartment below the defendant, said Mrs. Goodrich made the statement in three of five conversations with her.

Mrs. Goodrich is being retried on second-degree murder charges in connection with the 1973 shooting death of her husband Brent Goodrich.

Prosecutors said in the state's opening remarks that Tom Dudley, Mrs. Jones' former husband, was approached by Mrs. Goodrich to kill Goodrich for $10,000 of the insurance money.

Dudley was expected to take the witness stand Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Jones said that Mrs. Goodrich told her on one occasion she was going to Challis to purchase bows and arrows in an attempt to kill Goodrich because he was seeing another woman.

In other testimony, Boise private investigator Anson Garrett, formerly of Pocatello, said Mrs. Goodrich came to his home Oct. 6, 1973, and discussed her former husbands Blaine Bolles and Brent Goodrich and the purchase of a gun.

Garrett said Mrs. Goodrich told him, "If I can't have him no one else will."

She was "highly agitated" because Goodrich had a girlfriend in Challis, Garrett said.

News of record

Thefts

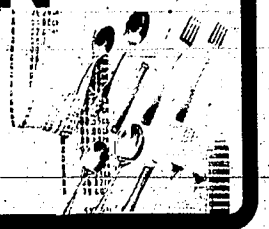

TWIN FALLS — Donna Steward told police someone entered her home and took three rings she had left on a shelf. She said the theft occurred sometime between July 28 and 30, and she has been searching for the rings since that time. Mrs. Steward said she thought possibly one of her children's playmates had picked them up, but none of the parents in the neighborhood had seen them. She reported the theft Monday. Value of the rings was reported at $625. She said her home at 1763 Borah Ave. N., was unlocked at the time.

Two Twin Falls residents reported gun thefts early this week. David Caldwell told police someone took a revolver from his parked vehicle sometime between Sunday night and Monday morning. He said the vehicle was parked at his home, 1734 Heyburn Ave. E. Value of the gun was set at $70. Caldwell told police the thieves passed up a citizen band radio and several other items.

Jesus Montes, 246 Sidney St., reported someone broke into his 1970 sedan sometime Saturday night and took a loaded pistol. He estimated value at $175. The vehicle was parked in front of his home at the time of the burglary.

Wuthrich, Ken's advance to state finals

Making a point

EXTRA HELP from Leslie Thomas of Wuthrich isn't needed as shortstop Rae Dene Kulm bends down to tag out an unidentified base runner during women's state slowpitch tournament action at Harmon Park. Tournament concludes Sunday.

TWIN FALLS — Patty Kasel drove in six runs and made two sharp early game catches to send Wuthrich Concrete Forming of Twin Falls past Sun Valley's Ore House 12-9 and into the finals of the state women's major division slowpitch championship.

In the single A division, Ken's Corner of Weiser moved into the finals by nipping Downtowner of Pocatello 2-0. Ken's scored a single run in the third when Jan Dossett singled and scored on an error and in the seventh Lemmon lived on an error and scored on Hughart's base hit.

Kasel plated the first two Wuthrich runs with a single, added a three-run bad-hop homer in the fifth and a sacrifice fly to plate half of Wuthrich's runs.

Wuthrich proved the only team capable of holding the tremendous one-inning offensive burst Ore House showed in the opening games Friday and Saturday.

The semi-final was the exact opposite of the quarter-finals in the major division. In those, Ore House survived a nine-run last-inning rally by Pour Haus of Twin Falls to win 12-11 while Wuthrich rallied from three runs down on two occasions to force its match with Coeur d' Alene Auto Parts into extra inning before winning 7-6.

Ore House was at its best in the top of the first inning against Pour Haus, a team which whipped the Ketchumites for the district title two weeks ago. Ore House pounded out nine hits, highlighted by a grandslam homer by Terri Tracy, to march into a 9-0 lead before Pour Haus got off the field.

Through six innings Ore House defense held Pour Haus to two runs while Ore House was adding three more. But in the last inning Pour Haus started slashing base hits and pulled to within a run. It got down to bases-loaded, two-outs before the rally burst on a three-hopper back to the pitcher.

Meanwhile, Auto Parts moved out on Wuthrich 3-0 and later to 6-3 before Wuthrich rallied in the top of the seventh. A pair of walks, a double by Leslie Thomas — off the rover's glove — and Karen Brown's single tied it up.

In the eighth, two poor throws resulted in the winning run getting on base and then scoring from third.

Over in the losers bracket, Green Mill of Lewiston was moving centerstage. Green Mill ousted highly regarded A and W of Moscow 6-4 and then sent host district champion Pour Haus to the sidelines 9-8. Auto Parts stayed alive by beating Seaport Blazers of Lewiston after the Blazers had ousted Coors and Sutton's Produce.

The 21st Street Barbershop made a run through the losers bracket, sidelining Captain's Galley of Mountain Home and Professional Pharmacy and Chemical Supply of Twin Falls before Lake City of Coeur d'Alene ended the run 12-10. The barbers led most of the way, up by one going into the final half of the last inning. But Nancy Reese unloaded a three-run homer to settle that.

On the other side, Central Premix of Coeur d'Alene picked up three loser bracket victories before succumbing. Premix dropped Pioneer Credit Union of Mountain Home, Century-Yamaha of Twin Falls and Erickson Pontiac of Idaho Falls before Latah County Title won the last game of the night 14-12.

Action resumes at 9 a.m. Sunday on two Harmon Park diamonds. Green Mill plays Auto Parts on diamond one while Lake City takes on Latah Title on diamond two.

All play then switches to diamond one. At 10:10 a.m., the Lake City-Latah survivor takes on the Downtowners with that winner challenging Ken's Corner at 1 p.m. At 11:20, Ore House plays the Green Mill-Auto Parts winner with the survivor taking on Wuthrich at 2:15 p.m.

Should either Wuthrich or Ken's Corner lose Sunday, an extra session will be played at 3:30 p.m.

In Friday's opening double A action, Green Mills of Lewiston dropped Brother Jakes of Ketchum 15-3; Wuthrich Concrete Forming defeated Seaport Blazers 10-3; Ron Sayers' Tomadachi defeated Stanley Trenching-Magic Valley Memorial 11-2; Ore House of Ketchum rallied from a 10-1 deficit to overhaul A and W of Moscow 12-10; Sutton Produce of Rexburg dropped Swift and Company of Twin Falls; Coors of Twin Falls edged Rogers Motors of Lewiston, and Pour Haus, Twin Falls, ripped Ervono's 27-4.

In the second round, first-round bye-owning Coer d'Alene Auto Parts dropped Green Mills; Wuthrich defeated Tomadachi 10-5; Ore House ripped Sutton's 13-4, and Pour Haus defeated Coors 6-2.

In single A play Friday morning, Pocatello Downtowners dropped 21st Street Barbershop, Century-Yamaha of Twin Falls beat Captain's Galley of Mountain Home; Erickson's Pontiac dropped Me n' Ed's Pizza 29-6; Lake City Royals rallied to beat Chemical Supply 8-4; Latah County Title beat Gateway Service of Ririe 11-6; Olympia of Pocatello won by forfeit in the seventh inning over Computerized Farming; Ken's Corner of Weiser defeate Central Premix, and Professional Pharmacy of Twin Falls downed Pioneer Credit Union of Mountain Home 9-4.

Winners of the second round advance to the quarter-finals. Downtowners nipped Century Yamaha, Lake City defeated Erickson, Latah Title dropped Olympia 12-3 and Ken's Corner dropped Professional Pharmacy 13-3.

Littler takes 4-shot lead into final round of PGA

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Gene Littler said he "blew" his game plan Saturday when he finally made a bogey after 43 holes of the PGA Championship.

But if that is all that blows around here, Littler will be a very happy man by Sunday night.

He has a four-stroke lead on Jack Nicklaus after three rounds in this last of the four major events that make up golf's Grand Slam, and most of the guys chasing him agreed they'd need some help to catch up.

Like a big wind.

You wouldn't know it from the calm conditions of the first three days, but it does blow around Pebble Beach most of the time. It was blowing a year and a half ago when Nicklaus shot 82 the last day of the Crosby Pro-Am, so it was something of an understatement Saturday when Tom Watson said, "If we get some wind, it could cause some problems."

Littler added a 2-under-par 70 Saturday to previous rounds of 67 and 69 and had a 10-under total of 206 for 54 holes. Nicklaus, unable to mount a charge and growing increasingly frustrated after two years of failing to win a 17th major title, had a 70 of his own for a 210 total.

Charles Coody, the 1971 Masters champion, was next at 70-211, and five more players including Watson were at 212.

"I don't feel comfortable being four shots ahead, especially of Jack," said the 47-year-old Littler, who won the 1961 U.S. Open and 28 other tournaments as a pro.

"Gene would have to play poorly (to lose) and I can't see him doing that," said Watson, who finally got to play with his own clubs—ground down and re-grooved to meet the rules specifications — and shot 71 Saturday.

"Gene knows Pebble about as well as anyone," Nicklaus echoed. "I don't expect him to make many mistakes. Look. It's as simple as this—I will have to play a lot better than him to win."

Nicklaus, runnerup to Watson in both the Masters and British Open this year, seemed ready to mount a charge Saturday when he knocked a 5-iron approach 8 feet from the hole and made an eagle three at the 502-yard second hole. But he added only two more birdies and after three-putting 17 for bogey, he threw his ball to his caddy in an uncharacteristic gesture.

"I've played well enough this year to have won at least one major," Nicklaus said, "but someone else did. Now, I've played three pretty good rounds on Pebble this week, and someone else is leading."

Tied with Watson at 212 were Jerry Pate (69 Saturday), George Cadle (70), Gil Morgan (70) and Lanny Wadkins (72).

Donner, Minico stop Boise Gems

BOISE — Kevin Donner threw a four-hit, 11-strikeout effort at the Boise Gems to give the Minico Saga a 6-1 victory in the first round of the state Legion tournament late Saturday night.

Minico took the lead in the fourth when Donner was hit by a pitch, Bob Harding belted a double and both scored on a Paul Tremayne single. In the seventh, Dick Maggard and Tony Bringhurst scored on a hit by Greer McKendrick and an overthrow and Minico wrapped it up in the eighth with two more. Tony Wilson singled in Kelly Ferrin for the first round and a wild pitch plated the singling Dick Maggard seconds later.

Boise broke the shutout in the ninth when losing pitcher Duck Bates opened with a double and moved around on a single and fielder's choice.

In other action Saturday, Idaho Falls nipped Pocatello 6-5 in 10 innings, Nampa dropped Coeur d'Alene 14-2 and Lewiston blanked the Boise Senators 15-0.

Minico plays Nampa at 9 p.m. Sunday.

You are gone!

Rams drop Eagles

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Rookie running back Wendell Tyler plunged one yard for the first Los Angeles touchdown and sprinted 59 yards to set up a second Saturday night as the Rams beat the Philadelphia Eagles 20-3 in an NFL exhibition game.

Tyler, UCLA's all-time leading rusher and a third-round draft choice, put the Rams ahead to stay with 1:18 to go in the opening half when he topped a 41-yard drive with his touchdown.

The Eagles had a brief 3-0 lead on a 42-yard field goal by Horst Muhlmann 6:23 into the second quarter.

Tyler's sparkling 59-yard run gave the Rams the ball on the Philadelphia 17 and Art Best, another rookie running back, gave them a 13-3 lead with a 17-yard run on the next play at 9:13 of the third quarter.

Joe Namath started the game at quarterback for Los Angeles, which was coming off the loss to Minnesota in the exhibition opener last weekend. The ex-New York Jets' star could only net 23 yards in three series before being replaced by Pat Haden early in the second quarter.

Hale to embark on new cage career

Rambling around:

Jerry Hale, former CSI basketball coach and recently relieved coach at Oral Roberts University, will advance to a new phase of his career in basketball this winter.

Hale told friends from Twin Falls visiting the southwest last week — that he will be associated with a "professional team" and be out in the hinterlands scouting likely prospects. Hale didn't reveal the name of the team but since his long association with Lewis Schaffel is well known around here, it isn't hard to imagine the position is with the New Orelans Jazz.

Schaffel, now the Jazz general manager, was the young attorney you'll recall, who helped funnel such talents as Ron Behagen, Vic Kelly, Steve Hegens and Rick Sobers to CSI during Hale's reign here.

Currently Hale is raising soybeans — evidently on his mother-in-law's farm — just outside of Tulsa and Frankie Hale has decided to return to the classroom as a teacher this year.

Coach Hale confidently told CSI fans that he would "see them in Twin Falls a couple of times this winter" as he embarks on his new scouting career.

Congratulations to Coach Bruce Coles and his Burley Braves, who finished fourth in the regional senior Babe Ruth tournament in Lander, Wyo., this week.

Coles and his crew were lodged in the fourth spot Tuesday night when they bowed to British Columbia 4-3.

But from Coach Coles standpoint, the best news came after the Braves had returned to Burley.

"I got a call from the Oregon coach telling me he had represented Idaho in picking up the sportsmanship award. We're really proud of winning that," Coles said.

"I think it was a great experience for the kids," he said concerning the tournament. "Unless you're a Dwight Church (Lewiston Legion coach), Idahoans don't get much experience in regionals. I thought the pageantry and organization of the tournament was outstanding. And I'm sure it will be something that the boys will remember the rest of their lives."

CSI Coach Mike Mitchell hasn't held a practice session here yet but he's already confident that the 1978-79 season-opening tournament will be one of the biggest things in the history of CSI basketball.

You'll recall that, under the sponsorship of Bill Koch, CSI is inaugurating a three-day, eight-team tournament the first week of December. It will feature national powers CSI and Casper, Wyo., along with highly regarded, but seldom tested Yakima, along with Ricks, TVCC and three other Washington junior college teams.

"I've already lined up San Jacinto (Pasadena, Tex.) and Howard County (Texas) and Casper for 1978," Mitchell said. "San Jacinto is always one of the best teams in the country and while Howard considers defense a four-letter word, it is always one of the best offensive teams in the nation and a lot of fun to watch. They always average over 100 points a game."

Karl Kleinkopf, who has made Jerome high school one of the most the, major state A-2 class track powers in the state, is giving it and teaching up this week to go into a new field — or in old field.

Kleinkopf will be announced as a new employe of University of Idaho, operating that school's extension service farm at Aberdeen. Kleinkopf said that while he hates to give up coaching, he has increasingly felt a desire to return to agriculture.

Now, the Jerome track program shouldn't suffer much. Tim Dunn will take over and Dunn's record in cross country runs something like no one can remember the last time he didn't win state. Tim doubtlessly can — but the rest of us can't.

Jerome also may or may not have filled its basketball job. Al Thorn left the position to go into private business in Utah. It is known that Jerome has hired Pat Hoke, Boise State basketball center, but not whether he also received the basketball assignment.

Dick Stickle, former Wendell three-sport letterman and now overseer of Idaho's interscholastic activities, reported to prospective football officials that there were no deaths in that sport last year attributable to neck and back injuries. He said the 17 — including two in this state — were due to subdural hematoma. It marked the first time in many years that neck and high back injuries weren't responsible for a large number of unfortunate deaths.

Stickle said it was felt this fact was due to the enactment of new regulations and strict enforcement concerning spearing, head butt-type offensive and defensive maneuvers.

Stickle told the officials that strict enforcement of these regulations — even to the point of less than borderline cases — was imperative if football is to remain a part of the American athletic scene.

And he amply illustrated his point with this story.

A Florida boy incurred a neck injury and initiated a lawsuit against the helmet manufacturer, Riddell. In the district court the youth, paralyzed from the neck down, was awarded a judgement in excess of 10 million dollars.

Riddell immediately appealed the decision and announced that if it were allowed to stand, the firm would immediately discontinue manufacturing football helmets. Firms in the same business indicated the same thing.

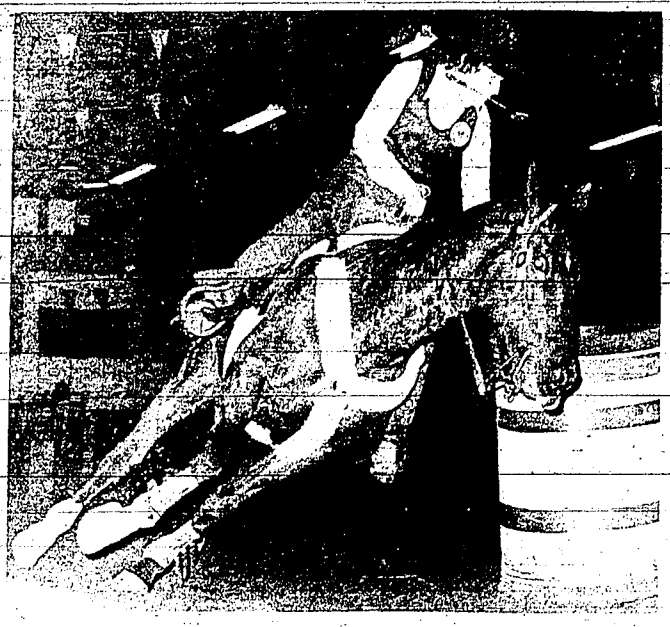

The appeal lessened the judgment somewhat. It gave the youth $75,000 per year for life — a figure we find substantially over the average earning expectancy of a high school boy but one you can't argue with now that the courts are running this country so completely.

And perhaps the boy, if such negligence was that provable, deserved the figure. But the one that frosted here was the same appeal court gave the boy's lawyer 2.3 million dollars.

And with that for background, guess how much we can expect for relief form the judicial branch of government against the dog-wagging barristers.

It is not the type of decision that discourages ambulance chasing!

CSI's top woman rider

TINK JONES rounds a barrel in good form in the Weber State Rodeo last year. Tink was CSI's top woman rider last year and will return to ride for the Golden Eagles this year.

Jones gives CSI one last year before turning pro

By JEFF SHER
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — Tink Jones learned to race barrels by watching the top riders through the arena fence.

Now all the other girls are watching Tink.

Last year the non-qualifiers watched as Jones, 20, raced to a fourth place finish in barrel racing in the intermountain region college standings, despite missing four of the eleven rodeos in the region.

Before that they watched her win the all-around cowgirl title in the 1975 district five rodeo. That same year she finished eighth in the barrels in the national Little Britches Rodeo.

Thanks to the persuasiveness of Shawn Davis, the former world champion saddle bronc rider who is now the CSI coach, Jones will be riding for the Golden Eagles again this year.

Davis convinced Jones to ride out her last year of eligibility for CSI before launching into her quest for her ultimate rodeo goal, the barrel racing championship of the professional girls rodeo association.

Jones said she agreed to ride one more year for CSI because of the quality of coaching she can get from Davis, because CSI's new Expo Center is the finest indoor rodeo facility in the Intermountain Region, and because CSI is now giving the rodeo club the kind of support they deserve.

On top of that, Davis is putting together what may be CSI's best rodeo team ever, and Jones loves to win.

Jones finished in the top ten in barrels, goat tying and breakaway roping in the Intermountain Region last year, but her specialty is barrels.

Jones says the secret to winning at the barrels is to "not lose momentum when you go into a turn and stop running."

The right way to run the barrels, according to Jones, is to cue your horse with a light rein check to collect herself for the turn just as her front legs pass the barrel.

Then, as your horse takes her first stride into the turn, kick out with your inside leg to move the hind quarters around. It only takes two strides for the horse to round the barrel, so after the first stride, kick with your outside leg to straighten your horse out for the sprint to the next barrel.

Jones tries not to lean to either side through the turn. She sits "right down in the saddle" and tries to keep her weight off the back legs and over the horse's front legs.

At the college level and above, the casual horse hobbyist doesn't have what it takes to win consistently.

Jones wins because she works hard on her riding. "Every day I put in six hours easy," she estimates. Riding and showing since she was eight, even a pelvis broken in two places in 1970 when her horse fell on her hasn't broken her stride. Thirty days in traction plus a little R & R and she was back in the saddle.

A lot of her time in the saddle goes into keeping her horse in top condition. She rides her horse 5-10 miles a day just for conditioning.

Jones calculates it takes about 1½-2 years to train a horse for the barrels. It's a long, slow process of repeatedly walking the horse through the motions and drumming home the cues. But once the horse is trained to the barrels and running good, don't continue to work her on the barrels. Jones advises, or you'll run the risk of souring her towards barrel racing.

The Jones family now owns sixteen horses, but Tink was lucky she ever put her foot in a stirrup. Her father, Ron Jones, used to say none of his kids would ever get on a horse, because he saw his best friend killed on a horse when he was nine years old.

But one day his kids caught him in a moment of weakness and begged him for the $25 they needed to buy a horse. He reluctantly gave in and he's been holding down the bleachers at rodeos throughout the west ever since.

After CSI, Jones plans to either ride for a four-year college with a veterinarian-assistant program or to start preparing for the pro circuit.

Sooner or later she plans to start a boarding, breaking and training business on some family acreage near Kimberly as a sidelight to her real business, readying herself and a horse to go out on the road.

Pros find amateurs not only fallibles

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Golf's touring pros have done a lot of grousing over the years about the way "amateurs" run their most important tournament, the U.S. Open, but they are finding out this week their own organization can louse things up, too.

In the wake of the controversy over golf clubs and the usual complaining about pin placements, there was a new twist Saturday in the third round of the PGA Championship:

For the first time in almost anybody's memory, some players in a major championship were being forced to start their rounds from the 10th tee, rather than the 1st tee.

Somewhere near St. Andrews, Old Tom Morris probably was turning over in his grave.

Officially, the PGA said the reason for the two-tee use in the last two rounds (the higher half of the field begins from No. 10, the lower half from No. 1) was to "allow the players a later starting time" and give them a chance to sleep later.

"A joke," muttered Grier Jones, one of the lucky ones who got to play Pebble Beach from the first hole Saturday. "Nobody ever cares about the players."

On the regular PGA tour, the use of two tees is normal. But the events that make up golf's Grand Slam — the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and PGA Championship — always have been something special, and for that reason players have played the courses the way they were meant to be played.

At Pebble Beach, especially, there's a world of difference between starting on the front or the back nines. The first few holes are the easy ones, a chance to warm up before the stretch of horror along the ocean. And the 18th hole, perhaps the world's most famous single golf hole, is the perfect finish. Suddenly, for half the players who made the PGA's cut, the 18th hole becomes the 9th hole.

Of course, the real reason had absolutely nothing to do with letting the players have a little more sleep. The pairings were set up to accomodate television, which wanted the leaders to finish by 4 p.m. local time — 7 p.m. on the East Coast. However, it may be noted the same television network covered the U.S. Open here five years ago and no one started from the 10th tee that time.

"That's an awful tough hole to have to jump out on and start," said Gene Littler, the tournament's 36-hole leader with an 8-under-par 136 total. "You've got to really hit a good drive there."

Jack Nicklaus said he thought the 10th tee was used once to start players in the Masters and also in the U.S. Open, but he couldn't remember the year, and Littler said "I'd bet against it."

Fishing hints: by Swen

Fishing stories lately

Some of the reported catches lately have been: Doc McCarty, Rupperson has caught a 3 pound Walleye perch from Salmon reservoir. I had a report of a 17 pound Channel catfish caught just above Banberrys on the Snake River. Some excellent catches on the Richfield canal before they turned the water back in. Several nice messes of trout caught in the Snake river where springs feed the river below Twin Falls and down stream. Seems the river is so bad that the fish are bunching near the springs for good water.

Personal catch: Last Monday I tried Salmon reservior early in the morning. I caught many fish in the pound to 2 lb. range. One nice show-and-tell rainbow I kept. I found that the fish were biteing early in the morning and about 10 in the morning the perch started biting and that was the end of the trout fishing. My spot for this fishing was Skiiers beach just down toward the dam from Greys landing.

Best success was about 20 feet out on the sandy beaches using perch meat and large streamer flies. Watch for the jumping or working fish early in the morning and plant your spot.

Take a small boy fishing. He'll love you for it.

East Germans lead Europe track test

HELSINKI (UPI) — The defending champion East German team was the clear leaders Saturday in both the men's and women's competitions after the first day of the Europa Track and Field Cup finals, leading the West Germans by six points in the men's events and the Soviet Union by nine points in the women's events.

On a windy, damp day only one world record fell in Olympic Stadium, the women's 400 meter hurdles. East Germany's Karin Rossley, running the third hurdles of her carrier in the unfavorable outside lane, defeated previous world record holders Tatjana Storozheva of the Soviet Union and Poland's Krystyna Kacperczyk in 55.63 seconds.

The blonde, strongly-built East German, a former 400 meters flat runner, cut 0.11 seconds off Storozheva's mark set earlier this year. It was the first time the event was contested in a major competition.

"The outer lane was possibly an advantage as I could run at my own pace with no one ahead of me. I believe I can go under 55 seconds," Rossley said afterwards.

The Soviet Union had a poor day for a country which has taken the cup in the men's competition more often than any other nation. Their aging team was no match for the new breed of East Germans.

Austin grabs lead in Long Island meet

NEW YORK (UPI) — Frolicking in the rain, Debbie Austin reeled off the best round of her 10-year career Saturday, a six-under-par 66, to take a two-stroke lead over Jane Blalock into the final round of the LPGA's $100,000 Long Island Charity Classic.

Second round leader Betsy King, who seemed on her way to a fine celebration of her 22nd birthday when she drilled home a 30-foot par saving putt on the first hole, fell apart on the 18th with a triple bogey for a three-over-par 75 that dropped her five strokes off the pace in her first pro tournament.

Austin, a short, pudgy 29-year-old from West Palm Beach, Fla., already has won three tour events this year and said "I like my chances" to win her fourth Sunday.

"The shot that turned it around" for Austin, who started the day at two-under 142 and is now at 208 for 54 holes, was her chip shot on the sixth. She had already birdied the second, fourth and fifth holes, but when she chipped into the cup from 25 feet on the sixth, Austin overtook King and gained the momentum to keep going.

Altogether, Austin had seven birdies in the round and one bogey on the 13th, when she rushed her drive and hit into the rough.

Austin knew she had a good round, but when told it was the best of her career, she brightened and exclaimed, "It is, isn't it! My God, I didn't even think of it."

New addition to golf slate

$500 added to T.F. women's golf meet

TWIN FALLS — At least $500 in added money plus several other prizes await the field in the first annual Twin Falls municipal women's open golf tournament Aug. 18-19.

Tournament Chairman Pat Williams said 11 Twin Falls businesses are donating money and awards in an effort to make this one of the premiere women's events of the season.

"We're hopeful getting 100 entries," said Mrs. Williams. "Right now we're at a little over 80."

She said it wasn't important that the tournament reach 100 in its maiden voyage, only that the meet is well run and well received with an eye toward attracting better numbers and top players in future years.

The entry deadline is 6 p.m. Monday.

In an effort to make the tournament attractive, the committee is offering a steak fry twith the hierarchy of the men's association brandishing the barbecue sauce), plus a gross and net scotchball derby at 4:30 p.m. Thursday. Continental breakfast will be served to members of the field starting at 8 a.m. each day.

Mrs. Williams said she had been working hard to build a strong championship flight. The area favorites, of course, are Virginia Undhjem of Twin Falls and Sergene Sorenson of Burley. Rose Mary McRoberts, the Magic Valley amateur champion, is trying to arrange her work load to allow her time enough to play.

Caroly Craig, a nine-handicapper from Ontario, is in the field and Mrs. Williams said Kali Voyce Kurdy, several-time Idaho amateur champion, had indicated interest in playing although her entry hadn't been received as of late this week.

Sponsors of the tournament include Twin Falls Bank and Trust, The Paris, Anderson-Blake Insurance, Sherwood's Sporting Goods, Messersmith Auction, Standley Trenching, Kings of Lynwood, Albertson's, Seven-up Bottling Company and the Twin Falls Men's and Women's Golf associations.

A watch, donated anonymously, will go to the nearest-to-pin winner on No. 14.

NCAA tightens hold on cage meet spots

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — Under new NCAA rules, only the 16 conferences with the best five-year tournament records will get automatic spots in the annual basketball playoffs beginning with the 1978-79 season.

The NCAA executive committee made the change Friday during a meeting here.

Through the 1977-78 season, 21 conferences will get automatic spots.

The Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference had been reduced from three to two region spots, but the executive committee accepted the ECAC appeal and restored the three spaces.

In each of the four basketball regionals the executive committee ruled that four conferences would be seeded, rather than the recommended two, and that the two leading independent teams would be seeded next March.

Neil Thompson of the University of Texas, the NCAA president, also announced the group approved a $5.5 million budget, which includes the addition of one investigator. There will now be 12 investigators.

The budget also includes added payments for travel expenses for teams to NCAA championships which will be conducted in three divisions for 39 events. Additional travel costs will be reimbursed the following year, the first of a new football television contract which is held by ABC-TV for $118 million for four years.

Tom Jernstedt, NCAA director of tournaments, announced the 1977-78 playoff games on Saturday, March 11, and eight on Sunday, March 12.

The east and midwest regionals will be from Thursday night to the afternoon of Saturday, March 18, while the midwest and west regionals will be from Friday night to Sunday afternoon, March 19. It will provide two national doubleheaders.

Bobcat, lynx seasons set; crows added to Idaho 'game bird' list

BOISE (UPI) — Hunting and trapping seasons were designated on bobcat and lynx for the first time Friday in action taken by the Idaho Fish and Game Commission.

Idaho trappers will have some new regulations to get used to and bird hunters will have altered seasons to contend with this year as a result of other decisions made by commission members.

The new trapping regulations that go into effect this fall will require trappers to check their traps every 72 hours.

Last year only persons who trapped furbearers had to follow that rule but this year trappers of predators and unprotected wildlife also are subject to the regulation. The policy excludes government predator trappers, the commission said.

Traps cannot be set within 30 feet of any visible bait or lure to prevent the accidental taking of eagles and hawks and to discourage an overharvest of bobcat and lynx.

The new trapping regulations will make it unlawful to disturb or remove trapped animals which belong to another trapper.

This fall's regulations also will allow hunting of some furbearers. They are bobcat, lynx, red fox and raccoon.

The first hunting and trapping season on bobcat and lynx are described as a very restricted, one-month season from Jan 1. to Jan. 31, 1978.

The short season and the 30-foot rule on bait placement are expected to keep the bobcat and lynx harvest low.

The red fox season is Nov. 1 to Jan. 31 in northern Idaho and all year in southwestern Idaho except in Valley County. The season is Nov. 1 to Feb. 28 in southcentral and eastern Idaho.

For hunting and trapping raccoons, Nov. 1 to March 31 is the season in northern Idaho. It is all year in the rest of the state except for a total closure in the Salmon River drainage of Custer County.

Trappers will find three changes in the muskrat season this fall.

A portion of Washington County's season will be two and one-half months longer, however, seasons in Bear Lake and Caribou Counties will be shortened by four weeks.

In eastern Idaho, muskrat trapping at Market Lake Wildlife Managment Area will be restricted to permit trapping.

The commission increased controlled beaver trapping areas around the state to 67 from 65.

The number of beaver that can be taken in controlled areas statewide will increase to 1,162 from 1,067, the commission decided.

Trappers can expect a new format for the regulations Oct. 17 and simplified language.

In other action, the commission cut back this year's sage grouse season to seven days in the southwestern and southcentral regions of the state.

In addition, the commission lengthened the pheasant season and closed hunting to quail and chukars in four northern counties.

The forest grouse daily bag and possession limits were increased, the crow was made a gamebird and a season was set up for falconers in other commission action.

It also permitted hunting of cottontail and pygmy rabbits in Boundary County for the first time in several years.

For most of southwestern Idaho and the Magic Valley the reduction in the sage and sharp-tailed grouse season amounted to a two-day or one-weekend cut. But for western Owyhee County it was far more drastic — to seven days from 23.

The department recommended cutting the seasons in the Regions Three and Four to two days. But the commission liberalized that to seven, taking note of the sparse number of weekday hunters.

Commissioner Dick Schwarz warned others, however, that they are subjecting themselves to criticism for closing a season on Friday and at one point suggested a Wednesday closing.

For sage and sharp-tailed grouse, the commission set a Sept. 17-23 season in Adams, Owyhee, and Payette counties, Washington County west of the Minidoka-Arco Desert Road, Camas, Cassia County west of Interstate 80, Elmore, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Minidoka and Twin Falls counties. The daily bag and possession limit in those areas is two birds.

The commission set a Sept. 17-18 season for those portions of the Willow Creek and Grays Lake outlet drainages in Bingham and Bonneville counties which lie north and west of Crane Flat road running between the Blackfoot Reservoir-Bone Road and the Long Valley-Grays Lake road. Bag and possession limits are the same as last year.

For the Remainder of eastern Idaho the commission set a sage and sharp-tailed grouse season of Sept. 17-30. The bag and possession limits are the same as last year except that the bag and possession limits in those portions of Clark and Jefferson counties lying east of Interstate 15, Fremont, Madison and Teton counties include both types of grouse in the aggregate.

Pheasant seasons and bag limits elsewhere in the state this year will be similar to those of last year.

The wild turkey and mourning dove seasons this year will be similar to last with the same bag limits. Rabbit seasons and bag limits also will be about the same as last year except for the addition of hunting in Boundary County.

In setting the state's first formal crow season, the commission put no restrictions on daily bag or possession limits. All counties in Idaho will be open to crow hunting from Oct. 1 to next Jan. 31 and the birds may be taken by firearms, bow and arrow and falconry.

Falconers had asked for hunting seasons running from Sept. 1 to next March 31 but the commission felt that was far too liberal. For pheasants it set a season of Oct. 1-Dec. 31. For grouse, partridges and quail it set seasons of Sept. 1-Dec. 31. For mourning doves the season will be from Sept. 19-Oct. 29, for crows from Oct. 1 through Jan. 31 and for rabbits, from next March 1-Aug. 31.

Buhl returns with state Legion crown

BUHL — "Our pitchers really came through for us," said Buhl Legion Coach Jerry Hawkins as he safely put the state Legion "B" championship trophy in his growing trophy case.

Buhl claimed the title this past week the hard way, losing its second outing and then coming back through the losers bracket to throw the thing into an extra session.

Pitching star of the staff probably was Rick Davis, who won the opener and the finale with route-going performances. But Coach Hawkins declined to single him out.

"After we lost that second game, every pitcher we had was the star," he smiled.

Doubtlessly, the hardluck pitching award had to go to reliever Robb Bartlett who was tagged with the loss against Grangeville. Bartlett fanned 12 of the 13 men he faced in that relief stint. The one that got away, however, killed him.

That batter collected a double, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on a passed ball — the difference as Grangeville posted a 4-3 victory.

Buhl then was forced to repeat the opening round decision by again defeating Emmett 12-2. Emmett, meanwhile, had ousted Nampa.

Carey Schmeckpeper coasted to that 12-2 decision. Later, Vince Hamilton, who paced Buhl offensively with a .400 batting average, forced the game into the extra session with a 5-3 decision over Grangeville.

That brought Davis back and he breezed to a 6-1 decision. Brian Crawford plated the first Buhl run, his single being backed by hits by Davis and Schmeckpeper. Grangeville rallied into a momentary tie but Buhl started stretching away in the third. Joe Kippes was walked and scored the go-ahead run on Allyn Reynolds' base hit.

In the fifth, Mark Schaal and Crawford carried home insurance runs on Davis' single and Kippes iced the cake with a solo homerun in the sixth.

Seconding Hamilton in the hitting department for Buhl was Jim Smutny with a .350 average.

Miami topples Redskins 27-15

MIAMI (UPI) — Quarterback Don Strock and receiver Nat Moore connected for one touchdown and spearheaded another scoring drive Saturday to give the Miami Dolphins a 27-15 exhibition victory over the Washington Redskins.

Moore took a 10-yard third-period lob from Strock. Bob Griese's understudy, putting Miami ahead 13-7 and finishing a 35-yard drive that started with Tim Foley's interception.

Washington evened it at 13-13 on a 10-yard pass from Joe Theismann to rookie wide receiver Kevin Farrell.

But Moore and Strock went to work again late in the third quarter and early in the fourth, connecting on a 19-yard pass and running another 19 on Moore's end-around dash. Running back Gary Davis capped the 57-yard drive with a four-yard scoring sweep to the right.

The Dolphins added the clinching touchdown with 6:23 left to go when Jim Mandich made a diving catch of a 13-yard pass from Strock deep in the end zone.

The teams played to a 6-6 tie in the first half with the Dolphins scoring on a 16-yard pass from Griese to Freddie Solomon in the first quarter and Washington getting a 10-yard pass from Billy Kilmer to Jean Fugett in the second period.

Vikings nip Browns at buzzer

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Rich Danmeier kicked a 30-yard field goal with no time left in the game Saturday night to give the Minnesota Vikings a 34-33 victory over the Cleveland Browns in an NFL preseason game.

Danmeier missed a 35-yard effort with three seconds left and time ran out on the play but got another chance when the Browns were called for offside.

Backup quarterback Bobby Lee, who played the entire game for Minnesota, carried the Vikings 62 yards in seven plays with his passing to set up the score.

The Vikings closed to within two points with 4:10 left when Steve Craig blocked a Cleveland punt and Windlan Hall picked up the ball and returned it 10 yards for a touchdown.

Lee also connected on two touchdown passes to Sammy White.

Brian Sipe, who quarterbacked Cleveland in the first half, fired two touchdown passes and Don Cockroft kicked two field goals in the second half for the Browns.

Sipe completed eight of 11 passes for 138 yards. The Browns also got touchdown runs of 11 yards by Mike Pruitt and one yard by rookie Eddie Payton before halftime.

New Orleans tips Giants 23-7

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Archie Manning skirted right end for a touchdown 10 seconds before halftime and Bobby Douglass threw a 72-yard scoring pass on the first possession of the third quarter Saturday night to give the New Orleans Saints a 23-7 preseason victory over the New York Giants.

Douglass, who sat out last week's exhibition opener with a back injury, hit tight end Paul Seal on his first pass of the year for a 72-yard touchdown. The score came just 1:35 into the second half and gave New Orleans a 17-0 lead.

The Saints led 10-0 at the half on a 22-yard field goal by veteran Rich Szaro and Manning's one-yard dash around end.

Manning, who missed last season to have surgery on his throwing shoulder, had his second consecutive strong showing of 1977. He played the entire first half, completing eight of 15 passes for 136 yards. Manning's longest two passes were to tight end James Thaxton for 49 yards and 37 yards, the second of which set up the first touchdown.

New York's only score came with 4:36 to play when rookie quarterback Randy Dean threw a 35-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Roger Wallace. Wallace caught the ball on a tip from a Saint defender.

Hawks tip Cowboys in overtime

SEATTLE (UPI) — Seattle quarterback Jim Zorn drove the Seahawks 71 yards on the first three plays of sudden-death overtime and sent Don Testerman on a two-yard plunge over right tackle Saturday night to pull out a 23-17 victory over the Dallas Cowboys in an NFL preseason game.

Zorn flipped a 37-yard pass to running back Sherman Smith on the first play of the extra period and picked up 32 more when he connected with tight-end Ron Howard on the next play that set up Testerman's winning dive to keep the Seahawks undefeated in two exhibition tries.

Dallas defensive end Ed Jones earned his "Too Tall" nickname in regulation play by leaping up to block three Seahawk field goal attempts and send the contest into sudden death.

KC stuns Steelers

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — Jan Stenerud's third field goal of the game, a 29-yarder with 15 seconds left, lifted the Kansas City Chiefs to a 23-21 exhibition victory Saturday over the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The field goal capped a 65-yard drive in the final four and a half minutes to even the Chiefs' preseason record at 1-1-1.

Mike Livingston, bouncing back from four first-quarter interceptions, highlighted the drive with a 31-yard pass to free agent fullback Arnold Morgado, which gave the Chiefs the ball at the Pittsburgh 27. Kansas City also used two Pittsburgh penalties, a face mask and an offside, to keep the drive alive.

Livingston threw a 16-yard touchdown pass to Morgado 3:38 into the final period to give the Chiefs their first lead of the game, 20-14.

BYU won't go to bowl

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — If preseason favorite Brigham Young University wins the Western Athletic Conference football title, the second-place team probably will represent the conference in the Fiesta Bowl, it was disclosed Saturday.

BYU quarterback Gifford Nielsen said tenets of the Mormon Church, to which BYU adheres, prevents participation in any activity on Sundays.

This year's Fiesta Bowl, which the WAC champion hosts, is scheduled for Dec. 25 — a Sunday.

"If we win the conference championship, we can't go to the Fiesta Bowl because we cannot play on Sundays," Nielsen, a Mormon, said. "I hope we win. Then we can sit back and watch the second place team play in the game."

New York Jets belt punchless Falcons

ATLANTA (UPI) — The New York Jets, cashing in on all three of their scoring opportunities, beat the Atlanta Falcons 17-2 Saturday night to pick up their first victory in three preseason games.

The Jets were in Atlanta territory only three times in the ballgame. Tommy Marvaso intercepted a pass on the third play of the second period and took only five plays to march 32 yards, with Clark Gaines getting their first touchdown on a three-yard run with 3:00 gone in the period.

The Jets, who lost to Chicago and Philadelphia in their first two preseason outings, went 69 yards and settled for a 19-yard field goal by Pat Leahy midway through the third period to make it 10-2 after the Falcons got their only points with a safety in the closing minutes of the first half.

Bills defeat Detroit

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — O.J. Simpson ran for touchdowns of one and fifteen yards Saturday night to lead the Buffalo Bills to a 17-10 victory over the Detroit Lions in a pre-season National Football League game at Rich Stadium.

Simpson, who missed the Bills' first pre-season game while undergoing tests for blurred vision in his left eye, carried for 55 yards.

Patriots humble Packers

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI) — The New England Patriots reeled off two long punt returns for touchdowns and took advantage of numerous Green Bay penalties Saturday night to defeat the Packers 38-3 in an NFL exhibition game.

The Patriots, 2-0 in the preseason, led 17-3 at the half. They scored 14 points in the third quarter, putting the game out of reach on an 88-yard punt return for a touchdown by Ray Clayborn.

Washington sparks Charger win

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Running back Joe Washington registered a pair of touchdowns, his first coming on a dazzling 89-yard punt return, to spark the San Diego Chargers to a 32-13 romp over the San Francisco 49ers Saturday night in an NFL exhibition game.

Washington, who sat out his rookie season with a knee injury, scored his second touchdown of the night on a three-yard run with 6:18 to play giving San Diego a 26-13 lead. The Chargers evened their preseason slate at 1-1 while San Francisco remains winless in two games.

Washington's darting punt return came just 13 seconds before the half and gave San Diego a 13-10 lead.

Bengals batter Tampa Bay

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Rookie fullback Pete Johnson and second-year running back Tony Davis scored two touchdowns apiece and veteran quarterback Ken Anderson, playing only part of the first half, hit 14 of 17 for 177 yards Saturday night to lead the Cincinnati Bengals to an easy 45-0 preseason romp over the listless Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Broncos rap St. Louis

DENVER (UPI) — Veteran Jim Turner kicked five field goals and quarterback Steve Spurrier completed eight of 15 passes for 113 yards Saturday night to lift the Denver Broncos to a 15-7 preseason victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Turner had field goals of 39, 33, 19, 28 and 43 yards — never failing on an attempt.

St. Louis tallied on 67-yard run by second-year back Wayne Morris. Jim Bakker kicked the extra point.

Turner's first field goal came on the Broncos first possession of the ball, culminating an 11-play, 48-yard drive highlighted by the passing and scrambling of starting quarterback Norris Weese.

Bears stun Raiders on last-minute bomb

OAKLAND (UPI) — Reserve quarterback Mike Phipps hit Randall Burks on a 60-yard scoring pass with less than two minutes to play Saturday night to give the Chicago Bears a 10-13 exhibition victory over the Oakland Raiders.

The Bears had taken the ball on their 40-yard line following a punt.

Chicago took the lead by scoring after taking the opening kickoff. Walter Payton gained 26 yards on the first play and got nine on his second attempt.

Quarterback Bob Avellini completed a pass to Greg Latta for a first down on the Oakland 10 and three plays later Roland Harper went over left guard.

The Raiders tied the score early in the second quarter when they drove 80 yards in 17 plays. Quarterback Ken Stabler completed seven passes in the drive, the longest a 21-yard hookup with tight-end Dave Casper for a first down on the Chicago six. Fullback Mark Van Eeghen bulled over the middle for the touchdown on the next play.

Oakland went ahead just before the half after taking a Chicago punt on its 23 yard line. Reserve quarterback Mike Rae completed five passes in a row to put the ball on the Chicago 10 with 18 seconds to play.

Ryan posts 17th victory in beating Yankees 6-5

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mario Guerrero's two-out 12th-inning single scored Dave Chalk from third base Saturday to give the California Angels a 6-5 victory over the New York Yankees and make Nolan Ryan the American League's first 17-game winner.

Chalk had opened the inning by drawing a walk off loser Sparky Lyle, 8-4. After being sacrificed to second by Thad Bosley, Chalk went to third on Rance Mulliniks' fly ball before Guerrero drilled a ground single to center field.

Ryan gave up nine hits, struck out 11 and walked seven in 11 innings to raise his record to 17-10.

Reds tip SF on misplayed fly

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Johnny Bench's pop fly to right field with the bases loaded in the ninth inning Saturday went for a triple when right fielder Jack Clark lost the ball in the sun giving the Cincinnati Reds a 3-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Jim Barr, 11-9, entered the ninth working on a three-hit shutout but with two outs Ken Griffey bunted for a single and Joe Morgan followed with a single to left putting runners on first and third.

Phils edge Cubs in 11th

CHICAGO (UPI) — Bake McBride delivered a one-out three-run home run in the top of the 11th inning Saturday to lift the Philadelphia Phillies to a 10-7 victory over the Chicago Cubs and extend their winning streak to 10 games.

McBride, who had four RBIs in the game, stroked his 10th homer into the right field bleachers off losing pitcher Dave Guisti, 0-1, who had walked Ted Sizemore and pinch-hitter Ollie Brown.

Boston drills Seattle 13-6

BOSTON (UPI) — George Scott, Butch Hobson and Dwight Evans hit consecutive home runs as the Boston Red Sox sent 10 men to the plate in a seven-run sixth inning Saturday to trounce the Seattle Mariners 13-6.

It was the 13th win in 14 games for the American League East leaders and their ninth straight over the Mariners, who absorbed their seventh defeat in a row.

Money loser?

EVEN THOUGH many area farmers claim they will lose money on their corn this year, most of the crops are healthy and in this field near Delano, Minn., Wednesday the corn is almost as high as some of the farm buildings.

Record corn, wheat crops predicted despite heat

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Hot, dry July weather trimmed the size of the anticipated record corn crop, but the Agriculture Department's chief economist says enough is left to assure reduction of the food inflation rate next year.

Following release of the agency's August crop production estimates, economist Howard Hjort told a news conference Thursday he sees a 60-40 chance the government will move to curtail the 1978 wheat crop and a 50-50 chance for a similar surplus-cutting program on next year's corn.

If weather is normal for the rest of the season, the crop report estimated the overall harvest of all American crops will boom to a new record of 124 per cent of the 1967 total — up 2 per cent from last year's record.

The August report estimated corn production at 6.092 billion bushels on the basis of Aug. 1 conditions, down 293 million bushels or 4 per cent from the forecast made in July.

But Hjort said heavy Corn Belt rains in August have improved prospects and the September estimate may be higher. And even the August figure, he said, foreshadowed heavy livestock feed supplies which will be translated into more meat, milk, poultry and eggs for consumer markets.

Farmers should get definite word of the government's intentions on reducing 1978 wheat production before the end of August, Hjort said. He said growers should also be given "clear guidance" on possible government plans for corn, because that will also be a factor in decisions on how much winter wheat to plant in September.

Final decisions on restricting corn are not likely this month, however, the official said.

Hjort said the new estimates mean 1977 food inflation will remain at 6 per cent, and he believes the 1978 rate will be "slightly lower" than that.

The crop report estimated wheat production at 2.041 billion bushels, almost unchanged from last month's 2.044 billion. That was 5 per cent below last year but — like the corn estimate — was big enough to point toward another increase over the coming year in an already large surplus stockpile.

Hjort said the impact of the searing Southern drought was illustrated dramatically in the August crop figures. They showed peanut production down, and the corn crop in southern states off dramatically. The Georgia crop was down from nearly 134 million bushels last year to 39 million this year.

U.S. will watch world to determine wheat acres

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government farm officials will be watching the plans of other wheat producing nations as the administration moves toward a final decision on the 1978 wheat acreage reduction program it is reportedly planning to adopt, a ranking Agriculture Department official says.

No flat announcements are expected until later this month on the administration's intention to operate a "set aside" acreage retirement plan on next year's wheat crop, a step officials have been discussing for months in an effort to curb a growing wheat surplus.

But congressional farm leaders have been treating the use of "set aside" rules as a certainty for the 1978 crop which many farmers will begin planting in September. And Howard Hjort, the Agriculture Department's top economist, said in an interview today that future production plans in other countries will have some bearing on the final shape of American production policy.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland earlier had said that if American farmers were required to cut wheat production to help relieve a worldwide surplus of the grain, he would urge other major producers like Canada and Australia to do the same.

The American farmer, Bergland said, should not be forced to carry the whole burden of production cuts needed to bring the world wheat supply back into balance with demand and to raise the currently low price of the bread grain.

As the time approaches for a final decision on a 1978 American wheat reduction program, however, Hjort conceded that it cannot be keyed specifically to the proposed new international wheat agreement the administration hopes to negotiate later this year.

Talks on the proposed new agreement will not begin in London until next month. And since American farmers begin planting their 1978 winter wheat in the same month, Bergland has indicated he must announce plans for any acreage reduction program before the end of August — long before any international agreement can be concluded.

"But in whatever forms we can find, we will continue to encourage other countries to do their share (in improving the supply-demand balance)" Hjort told a reporter.

Even though no international wheat agreement will be in effect when the American decision on 1978 wheat is announced later this month, "the attitudes of other countries will have an impact on our decision," he added.

Hjort said the foreign attitudes will have some impact on whether or not a wheat reduction program is adopted. But the primary impact, he said, would probably be on the scope of the potential new program — the number of acres of cropland wheat farmers would be required to idle if they want to qualify for government supports on their remaining production.

Bergland and other officials have said repeatedly that their final decision on a 1978 wheat reduction program would be made shortly after release of the Agriculture Department's August crop report tomorrow.

The report will include an updated estimate of wheat production which was estimated in July at a near-record 1.044 billion bushels. Hjort said he personally did not expect the August report to differ by more than 15 million bushels — up or down — from the July forecast.

At this level, the crop would again be more than big enough to meet domestic and export demand for wheat in the marketing year which began June 1, and the surplus carryover stock would rise from 1.1 billion bushels this summer to nearly 1.3 billion bushels next June.

Arrange for pens at fair

FILER—Sheepmen planning to enter sheep in the Twin Falls County Fair Sept. 6-10 should arrange pens from the superintendent and make entries early.

W. E. McCoy, Buhl, is superintendent, and Col. Steve Dorfman, Calif., will serve as judge in the sheep department.

Classes of sheep to be entered include Hampshires, Corriedale, Suffolk and Southdown. Champion rams and ewes will receive rosettes and reserve champions, purple ribbons. Ribbons and premiums in four places will be given in all four classes.

The market lamb class is open to either purebred, grade or crossbred lambs. Champion market lambs over all breeds will receive rosettes, and reserve champions, purple ribbons.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, AUGUST 14, 1977

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Wind up whatever requires your strict attention before you consider any form of amusement. You are able to put new policies into effect with remarkably good judgment by considering them from the loftiest standpoints.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get rid of stumbling blocks in your path and then you can make great progress. Study conditions early. Postpone recreation until later in the day.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Give much attention to home affairs early and then invite some bigwig into your home and gain backing. Be sure to handle fundamental affairs wisely.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get into philosophical studies early and then enjoy company of friends and relatives. Come to a fine understanding with everyone.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Handle business affair early before you take on any new interests. You can add considerably to present abundance if you think and act wisely.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get rid of personal aims that no longer appeal to you and then plan what it is you want to do in the future. Get out socially and meet with interesting persons. Learn much from them.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Settle private affairs early and then confer with advisers about new, practical ideas you may have. Spend spare time with loved ones.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get into duties that will help you gain some personal aim. Later be off to some interesting outlet with congenials. Know how to get along better with others. Be yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Handle those duties that give you a more enviable position within the community in which you reside. Go to see an influential person you know for assistance. Be careful in expenditure of money.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Cultivate new contact who has very high-minded ideas, ideals, and can be helped greatly. Concentrate on expanding and you have success. Avoid a known troublemaker.

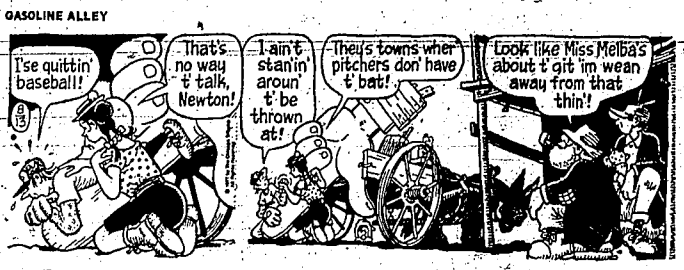

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get an early start on discharging your responsibilities and pave the way for added success in the future. Avoid one who could get you in debt.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan time to find what your position is with partners and later you can make progress with others you want in your life. Build a better public image for yourself.

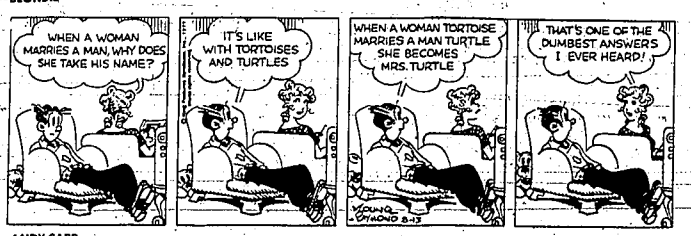

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Get rid of duty obligations that face you and then plan future activities. Take right health treatments and improve vitality. Save time for one who has a good idea to talk over with you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY he or she will be capable of learning, absorbing a good deal early in life and sh..ld therefore be given a good education that will help make life successful and happy as well.

Item No. 914A in our Love and War man's file on kisses lists same as to type. Edited down, it merely says there are kisses that love, kisses that soothe, kisses that thrill, kisses that amuse, kisses that pay homage and plain duty kisses. Be sure to use the right kiss at the right time. Substitute that thrill kiss for the pay-homage kiss and you could be in real trouble.

PATRIOTIC BUOY

Q. "Is it true there's a red, white and blue buoy moored in Baltimore harbor to mark the spot where Francis Scott Key wrote 'The Star-Bangled Banner'?"

A. Not anymore. It was only there for a couple of months in the fall of 1914.

Rudyard Kipling once expressed the notion that nearly every man has one place above all others where he'd like to retire. His choice was Sussex, England. Personally, think I'd prefer Dominion Terrace at Sequim on the Olympic Peninsula in Washington State. Sequim is the sunshine spot thereabouts. Some sort of configuration in the Olympic Mountains protects it from the rainfall which annually increases one inch per mile going both east and west from that bright town.

FAMILY FIGHTS

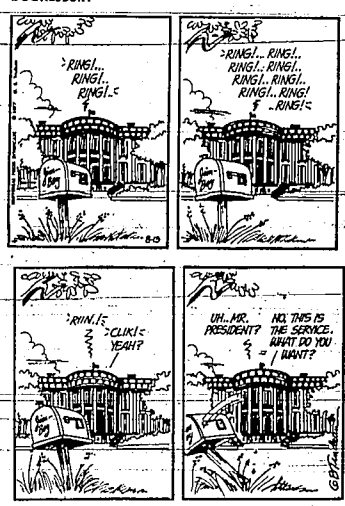

Two things in particular tend to make a man or woman furious. One, to be reminded of a weakness said party already knows exists. And two, to be downgraded in some real ability about which said party's secretly proud. Marriage counselors say more than a third of all family fights start when husbands or wives commit these offenses against their matrimonial mates.

Possibly the most intriguing press conference of an older generation was held by that renowned striptease artist Gypsy Rose Lee. In Milwaukee, it was. Wearing a high-neckline dress with long sleeves, she walked into a roomful of reporters, and as she offered her introductory remarks, she slowly unbuttoned three buttons at the wrist of each sleeve. That's all. Yet nobody there remembers what she said. And nobody there has forgotten that little session, I'm told.

Shoshone 4-H winner

SHOSHONE — Tom Croft, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Croft, Shoshone, has been selected state winner in 4-H photography for projects over the past seven years.

Croft will receive an all-expense paid trip to the national 4-H Club Congress to be held in Chicago the last week in November this year.

He will re-arrange his book and submit it for the national judging soon.

If Croft is named a national winner, he will win a college scholarship. His book will be on display at the National Club Congress.

Soybean oil mill feasible in Northwest, study says

RICHLAND, Wash. (UPI) — A government study shows it would be economically feasible to construct an oil seed processing mill if some 200,000 acres of irrigated Pacific Northwest wheat land were changed to soybean production.

Soybeans have traditionally brought a good price to the grower. And the beleaguered wheat farmer was hit with oversupply last year and drought this year.

The current price for soybeans is more than $5 per bushel, compared with around $2.60 or lower per bushel for wheat.

Cost of production for both crops is not that much different.

Battelle Northwest, Richland, conducted the study. Officials said copies would be sent to the governors of Washington, Idaho and Oregon.

The Pacific Northwest Regional Commission ordered the study.

Meanwhile, Battelle said feasible sites for a proposed $40 million processing mill were found in Burley, Idaho, the Tri Cities and Portland.

The mill would be capable of extracting oil and making high protein meal from 800 to 1,000 tons of soybeans per day.

In addition to processing soybeans, the mill would be capable of extracting oil from other oil-seed crops like sunflower, safflower and corn.

Symms, Hansen commended

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The president of the National Association of Wheat Growers commended Idaho Congressmen Steve Symms and George Hansen today for their work on legislation to improve wheat target prices and loan levels.

Don Howe, Banners Ferry, said the compromise bill, which will be acted on in September, "is acceptable to the USDA and should have no problem clearing President Carter's desk."

"This legislation offers updated economic protection for 1978 and subsequent years," Howe said.

The new farm bill will increase the target price for the 1977 wheat crop to $2.90 per bushel from $2.47 per bushel, the association president said.

Idaho producers would be eligible for payments after Oct. 1.

"The wheat target price for 1978 will be $3.05 per bushel if national production is less than 1.8 billion bushels and $3 if output exceeds that level," Howe explained.

Limitations on producer payments are increased to $40,000 in 1978 and will be moved up to $50,000 in 1980, he said.

Provisions also were made for annual cost of production increases in the target price levels established by the bill, Howe said.

Fair to judge five horse groups

FILER — Five classes of horses will be featured at the Twin Falls County Fair Sept. 6-10.

Birchie Brown, Kimberly, superintendent of the horse department, said entries will include Morgans, paints and pintos, Arabians, Appaloosas and quarterhorses. Judging in this department will begin at 8 a.m., Sept. 7, so all horses must be on the grounds by 9 a.m., Sept. 6.

Out-of-state horses must meet Idaho interstate health shipment requirements and all horses are subject to veterinary inspection at the grounds.

Performance classes for Appaloosa horses, sponsored by the Magic Valley Appaloosa Horse Club, will begin at 1 p.m., Sept. 7. Ribbons will be awarded the first four places in English pleasure hunt seat, western pleasure for over 18 years; western pleasure, under 18 years; reining, Camas Prairie stump race, Nez Perce stake race, key-hole race, western riding, all ages; trail class for over 18 years, and trail class under 18 years.

Performance classes for quarterhorses will begin at 8 a.m., Sept. 8. Ribbons will be awarded four places in barrel racing, western riding, pole bending, western pleasure, junior and senior; trail horse, hunt seat, English pleasure, reining and amateur western pleasure.

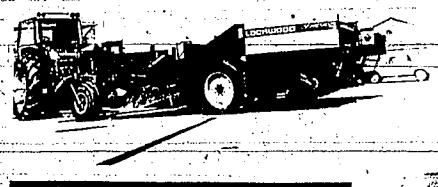

Youth quarterhorse performance classes will be held immediately following the performance classes and youth cow cutting is scheduled for Sept. 9.

WHAT IS A CONDOMINIUM?

Condominiums are, you probably know, mean that everyone owns his own apartment. There are four Apartment/Homes in each building, which we call a Four-plex, and each building looks like a home. There are three quite different floor plans in each building, each unit has 2 bedrooms and a bath and many more quality features such as:

COLLEGE MEADOWS CONDOMINIUMS

What Do You Get For Your Money?

THE CUSTOM LOOK
Wall-to-wall carpeting, draperies and a variety of exterior designs and shake roofs give each Apartment/Home all the good looks of a custom-built house.

KITCHEN BUILT-INS
Step-saving electric kitchen abound in glamorous colors with distinctive built-in range, garbage disposal and hooded exhaust fans, refrigerator and dishwasher.

QUIET PRIVACY
To assure each owner complete, noise-free privacy, our Apartment/Homes are designed and constructed with a separate entrance to each apartment, double thick walls between apartments, with no one else living above or below your apartment unit.

OFF-STREET PARKING
Rear driveway with covered parking and private storage lockers are provided so that Apartment/Home owners may park off the street. This means that all main streets are more pleasant appearing and free of driveways and garages.

UNDERGROUND UTILITIES
Underground wiring for power, telephone and cable television.

HEATING & AIR-CONDITIONING
Electric baseboard heat with thermostats in each room for individual control. A wall air-conditioner for the hot summer months.

LAUNDRY ROOM
Each building has its own utility room with washer and dryer.

QUESTION: Should the United States switch to a metric system? Why or why not?

Mrs. Iva Green, Twin Falls:
"I wouldn't like it. Everyone would have to get re-educated to it, and I don't want to have to go back to school."

Mrs. Beth Smith, Twin Falls:
"Yes. I think it would be better for it to be an international system. It makes sense because it's based on a scale of ten."

Jerry Pierson, Twin Falls:
"No, definitely not. I'm too old to have to learn the metric system."

Brian Crockett, Twin Falls:
"We should adopt it. We're behind the rest of the world now because they're metric and we're not."

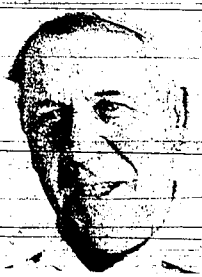

Al Ware, Hansen:
"No. I don't understand it. I personally feel that to convert to the metric system is going to cost a lot of money. I've never been one to do something just because everyone else is doing it."

Mrs. Linda Barnes Jerome:
"No. There are too many of us who learned it the other way. There are too many numbers in it."

Mrs. Merle Stoddard, Twin Falls:
"I don't care, really. It's not that difficult. If they do it gradually, and over a few years it might be all right."

Max Howell, Filer:
"I think so. The rest of the world is on it. Why should we be out of step?"

Buy prints becomes good word for growing number of persons

By NORMAN NADEL
NEW YORK — (NEA) — Buy prints.

That's the good word, as it has been for most of the past 20 years, for a steadily growing number of men and women — mostly but not necessarily young — who want to collect stimulating, satisfying, significant, original works of art without spending a millionaire's allowance on the project.

The key word is "original," which means that the artist himself has done the creative work on the particular print that has captured your fancy. It will bear his signature, along with a number such as 63-100, which means you have the 63rd print out of a limited edition of 100.

Prints are not to be confused with reproductions or copies, which the artist probably has had little or nothing to do with, beyond creating the original work. Reproductions can be made by a variety of printing and photographic techniques, and are cheap. Actually, if a reproduction gives you pleasure, buy and enjoy it. But know it's not an orginal.

There are four basic graphic arts processes for producing prints: relief, intaglio, planagraphic (lithograph) and stencil (serigraph or silkscreen).

In relief, the artist cuts away unwanted areas of wood or linoleum, leaving a raised design which is inked and pressed against a suitable kind of paper.

Intaglio is the opposite. The design is cut or etched into a surface by one of several methods (etching, engraving, drypoint, mezzotint, aquantint). Ink is spread on, then wiped off, so that it remains only in the etched grooves. This is pressed onto paper or fabric.

Lithography prints whatever is drawn, usually with a greasy crayon, on a prepared surface: a flat stone or treated metal plate. The ink clings to the crayon but not to the dampened stone, and is transferred to the paper in a Litho press.

Silkscreen or serigraph is a stencil process. The artist uses a varnish-like substance to fill the mesh of tightly stretched silk where he does not want to print, so the ink can pass through the untreated areas. There must be as many screens as there are colors, all perfectly registered on the final print.

And how much does a print cost? From about $20 up to about $1,000 when they're first published, depending on the obscurity or fame of the artist, and the number of prints in the particular limited edition. Once a print edition is sold out, copes can go into the $20,000 to $30,000 range, but that is rare; a Picasso, a Braque, a Toulouse-Lautrec, perhaps.

A Jasper Johns print, published in 1960 for $75, can bring above $4,000 today. Recent auction prices of prints at Sotheby Parke Bernet include a Picasso for $5,250, a Rauschenberg for $4,250.

A better index of value for a print is its importance to museums, especially when copies of the edition no longer are on the market. For example, Toulouse-Lautrec's "Partie de Campagne" from L'Album d'estampes originales de la Gallerie Vollard" (1897), is a delicate, lovely scenic in yellow, pink, blue, beige and green. The lithograph edition was 100 prints, of which one each is in the Art Institute of Chicago, the Minneapolis Museum of Art, the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, and the National Gallery of Art in Washington.

With a popular painter, the increase can occur fast, as with American artist Fritz Scholder's "Indian in Paris." Published last October at $500 per print, it had increased to $1,000 by early spring when only a few of the edition of 100 were left, and since then, scarcity has driven the purchase value into the $5,000 range.

Although good prints are a fair bet to increase in monetary value, most serious collectors and curators warn against buying them just as an investment. "The first thing is to satisfy yourself," insists Riva Castleman, curator of prints at the Museum of Modern Art and director of the current exhibition, "Impresario — Ambroise Vollard." "You mustn't buy anything just for value; you must buy something you think you are going to enjoy.

"If you are out to buy anything you have never bought before, do a certain amount of logical thinking about that task. Inform yourself. See a lot of prints. Go to museums, get acquainted with the material. The choose and buy — for pleasure."

Device will show miles until empty

By DAN JEDLICKA
© Chicago Sun-Times

Many auto options are silly, but Ford Motor Co. soon will offer a revolutionary one that eventually may appear in all autos — a Miles-to-Empty device that shows motorists about how far they can travel before running out of gasoline.

The small, dashboard-mounted device "provides vital information via a digital display for the driver that would have taken a trailer-load of equipment to calculate before the advent of microelectronics," said Eugene R. Karrer, general manager of Ford Motor's Electrical and Electronics division.

After a car is started, its driver can get a miles-to-empty reading by pushing a button. Bright orange figures showing how far he can go light up. When the miles-to-empty number drops below 50, the device lights up automatically and remains on, serving as a low-fuel warning.

The device is very sophisticated, said Arnold J. Thibodeau, assistant chief engineer of the Ford Motor division. "Electronics would let us calculate and display for the driver a miles-per-gallon reading, but that would be an ego-trip device," Thibodeau said.

"We decided that miles-to-empty is what really counts.

"The system's heart is a large-scale integrated (LSI) circuit that's less than a quarter-of-an-inch square, but which contains microscopic circuits with approximately 3,600 transistors.

"The LSI is the brain of an electronic processor that receives information from a sensor in the fuel tank sensing fuel level and a sensor linked to the transmission sensing vehicle speed.

"From these two inputs, the electronic processor calculates distance traveled, fuel usage and fuel economy in miles per gallon. It then multiples fuel economy by the fuel level to get the miles-to-empty fuel economy by the fuel level to get the miles-to-empty estimate that's transmitted to the digital display."

Thibodeau said the miles-to-empty estimate is based on how the car is driven. The electronic processor makes calculations in cycles, each lasting slightly more than a minute. During this period, the processor compares the fuel-usage rate with that of the previous period. If it's changed, the miles-to-empty estimate is updated. Otherwise, the estimate decreases one mile for each mile driven.

Three's comedy

JOYCE DEWITT (Janet Wood), John Ritter (Jack Tripper) and Suzanne Somers, (Chrisa Snow), from top, star in the ABC Television Network's hit comedy "Three's Company," which begins specially selected encore presentations Thursday with "A Man About the House." The show will debut in a new time period in the fall on Sept. 13, on ABC.

If using mysterious boomerang, watch for knuckles, ankles, head

By DAVE van DYCK
© Chicago Sun-Times

The one thing to remember when you first throw a boomerang is to keep 100 yards from anything.

When you start to master the boomerang, the one thing to remember is to watch out for your knuckles and ankles and forehead.

The boomerang, while a wondrous little piece of wood, is also a stubborn object.

"The boomerang is mysterious," writes Benjamin Ruhle, whose new book "Many Happy Returns" (Viking Press, $4.95) not only chronicles the past but guides the reader through building and throwing the stick.

He also says he once sailed one "that totaled a $300 watch on my wrist."

Ruhle, publicist at the National Archives in Washington, has helped introduce the "sport" of tossing a boomerang to the nation's capital.

"It's for the knowledgeable few," he writes, "for several friends who get together and throw to their heart's content without anyone else around. Spectators are distracting; besides, the6 might get hit by an errant boomerang."

He also calls it an adventuresome sport and admits it is an attention-getter, even if you can't make it return to the exact spot thrown.

The boomerang most people know is a banana-shaped stick about three feet long. The wings are three inches across and it has a tear-shaped cross section a half-inch thick. It weighs less than a pound. It is of the simplest and yet most complex aerodynamic design.

Listen to what Ruhle writes:

"A number of scientific rules are obeyed by the boomerang as it traces a circle in the sky. Are you ready? They include Bernoulli's principle, Newton's laws of motion, gyroscopic stability and gyroscopic precession. Few mechanical devices demonstrate so many laws working together and this gives the impression that the boomerang follows no law."

In his pursuit of discovering and uncovering facts about the boomerang, Ruhle became the official record keeper for the Guinnesss Book of World Records.

Here are some amazing facts he has recorded:

— One man says he caught 388 boomerangs in a row. He throws three with his right hand and one with his left (simultaneously) and then catches all four. This same man, John McMahon of Texas, is said to have caught 37 in a row behind his back.

— One stuntman caught boomerangs blindfolded, knowing where they were by the whirring sound.

— A Dutch physicist curved a boomerang around the base of the Washington Monument, which is 55½ feet by 55½ feet.

— An Englishman tossed boomerangs from his right and left hands and had them land exactly between his legs, one on top of the other.

— Ruhle, apparently sane and the author of an entertaining book, even claims to have a cat which catches them.

All of this may not seem so great — unless you've tried to throw a boomerang and had it take off like a knife, never to return. After a couple of 50-yard walks to pick it up, anyone could be discouraged.

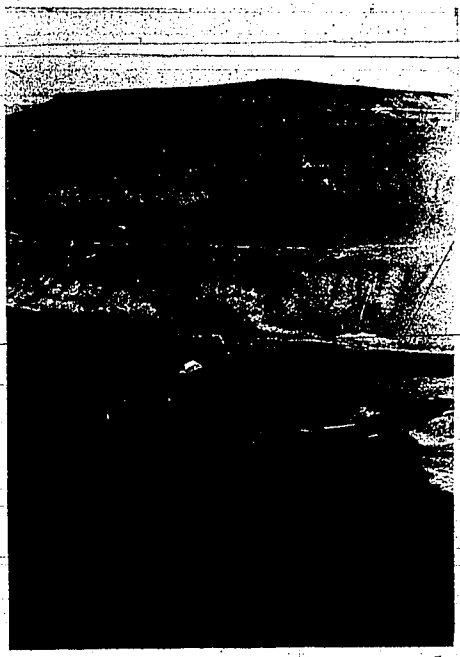

And yet Ruhle says, "If you're not critically uncoordinated, you can throw a boomerang so that it will return to you. You can catch the boomerang, too."

The nice part is he goes on to explain how.

Area gives unique habitat for raptors

AERIAL VIEW OF SWAN FALLS DAM
... marks boundary at birds of prey area

VALEZ BIRD PETERSON

TWIN FALLS — Those who have longed for the opportunity to sit and watch the majestic golden eagle soar overhead have a good chance to do so in the Snake River Canyon, and not too many miles away.

Not only golden eagles, but bald eagles, prairie falcons, sparrow hawks and great horned owls spend at least part of the year in the Snake River Birds of Prey Natural Area. The area has the densest breeding population of birds of prey, raptors, known anywhere in the world.

According to the Bureau of Land Management, 190 pairs of 10 species breed in the 33-mile-long quarter-mile strip along both sides of the canyon some 36 miles south of Boise.

Marsh hawks, red-tailed hawks and ferrigunous hawks nest in the Birds of Prey Natural Area (BPNA). Golden eagles stay all year. American rough-legged hawks and bald eagles winter here.

The habitat is ideal for several reasons. Townsend is ground squirrels, the raptors' major food source, abound, along with blacktail jack rabbits, various reptiles, small birds and other small rodents.

The prevailing northwest winds provide permanent updrafts necessary for larger birds to gain altitude and soar. Volcanic cliffs contain many shaded niches for nesting.

Coyotes, bobcats and badgers compete with the raptors for rodents and rabbits. Other wildlife species seen in the area are mule deer, beaver, mink and many species of waterfowl and shorebirds.

Currently this unusual ecosystem is threatened by agricultural interests. Cultivation of the prairies above the river removes cover and food for ground squirrels and other prey species.

Without sufficient food, the raptors will have no reason to nest here. The natural breeding grounds could be lost.

The Bureau of Land Management (BLM) owns 26,000 acres of the 31,000-acre area. In 1972 BLM initiated a year-round comprehensive study in the area on all raptor species to gather information for management and research needs. Raptor population, reproduction and food habits studies as well as some prey base studies were started at this time.

An official Birds of Prey Study Area was established in April, 1974. The resultant research project is a comprehensive, integrated effort tying together 12 different studies.

The project is designed to investigate the effects of cultivation upon the raptor food source and upon their population stability.

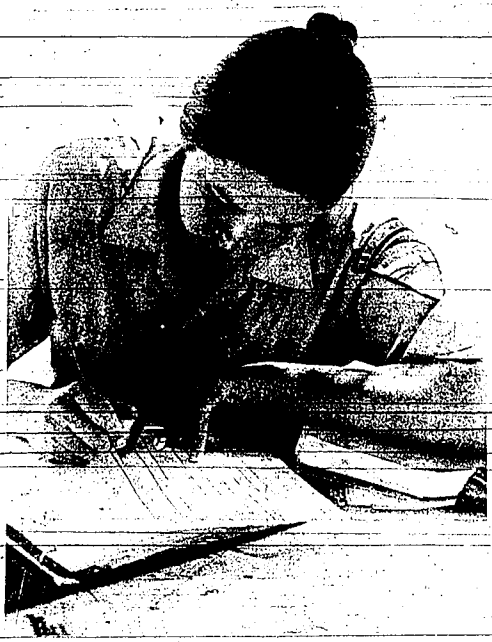

This research project has been identified as possibly the most significant research program on birds of prey carried out anywhere in the world. A moratorium on most land development on BLM lands within the study area boundaries was declared in 1975 pending outcome of the research project.

Besides research into species composition and density and reproductive performance and food habits of raptors, three support studies will estimate the absolute food requirements of nesting prairie falcons, golden eagles, red-tailed hawks and ravens.

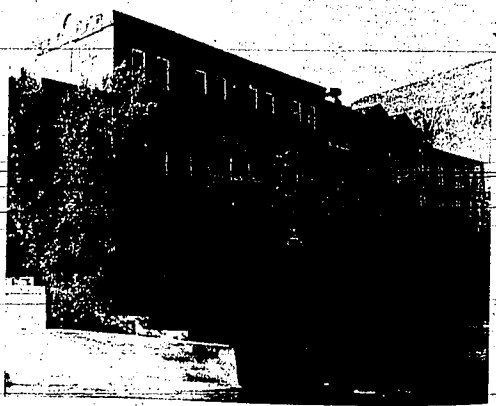

Another study is concerned with territorial size and social interaction of major raptors.

In order to assess the effect of cultivation on prey base, Utah State University, Logan, is examining the density and species composition of small mammals and birds in the study area. A separate Utah State study will describe vulnerability of prey species to raptor predation.

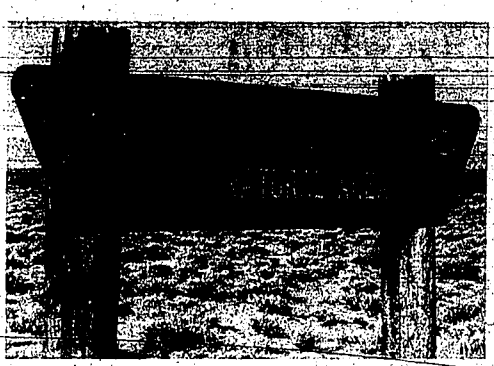

The University of Idaho is studying the ecology of various reptiles in the prey base, and another study is focusing its intensity on the Townsend's ground squirrel.

Idaho Cooperative Wildlife Research Unit is studying the effect of competitive predators — badgers, coyotes, and bobcats.

All information will be integrated to assess the life requirements of raptors and amount of area needed to sustain them and to determine the effects of cultivation upon the well-being of the raptor and to what extent agricultural development can be allowed in the hunting area of the raptors.

Agricultural pressures for release of the BLM land have been persistent. In February, 1976, BLM was petitioned by several Desert Land applicants for immediate release of land which had been applied for up to a decade ago. The Boise District decision not to release the land was backed up by the Idaho Office of the BLM.

Under the Desert Land Act the entryman pays an application fee plus 25 cents per acre, with a 320-acre limit, and has five years in which to develop land. At the end of this time the applicant can take title to the land if one-eighth of it is under production and water is proved available for the entire acreage.

The Carey Irrigation Act of 1894 also creates problems. Under this act, a million acres each of federal lands were deeded to specific western states. Each state was responsible for both the expenses of irrigation development and for encouraging farmers to apply.

In Idaho these lands are administered by the Idaho Water Resources Board. The board can immediately release any lands it receives, either under the Carey act or for direct sale, regardless of the needs of the BPNA.

The BLM has recommended to the Justice Department that this decision be appealed, and the outcome will have direct bearing on the future of the BPNA.

Not only would cultivation disturb the habitat of raptors' food source, but the land would have to be irrigated. Water will come either from deep wells or the Snake River.

Pumps set along the river would force the water up the cliffside for irrigation and at the same time leave the constant hum of pumps in the canyon.

Ranching is more compatible with the BPNA. Grazing cattle do not disturb the wildlife who live on the prairie.

Despite agricultural pressures, dedicated researchers continue their studies. Raptors are tracked through radio telementry. It was learned that a prairie falcon has gone as far as 15 miles to catch a ground squirrel and take it back to the nest.

Badgers are marked with ear tattoos and ear tags and some are equipped with radio transmitters fastened to a harness which is slipped over the head and front feet. Scientists hope to determine the area size where badgers hunt for food, where litters are located and the size of litter production.

A new project was begun several weeks ago. There are only 28 known pairs of nesting peregrine falcons. Three young birds that were hatched in Fort Collins, Colo., were brought to the area and put in a prairie falcon's nest.

The falcon's babies were moved to other 'foster' nests. The prairie falcon has adopted the peregrine nestlings, and if she continues to raise the young birds, this may be a way of getting them established in the area.

If this project works out, it may be possible to have the birds removed from the endangered species list.

Birds begin coming to the BPNA in February. Activity is most intense during May and June when raptors are nesting. August through January, the area is deserted except for golden eagles and great horned owls who stay all year.

Birdwatchers will have the best chance of seeing raptors from 8 a.m. to noon and from 5 to 7 p.m.

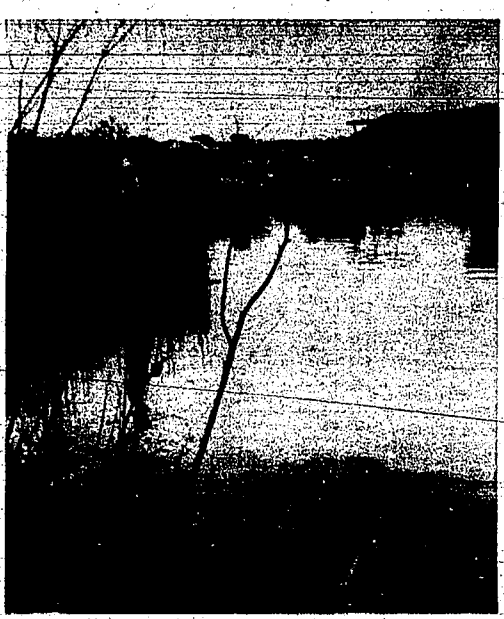

The area can be reached by following I-80 west of the Kuna-Meridian exit at State Highway 69, proceeding south to Kuna and then following Swan Falls Road south and east 15 miles (most is unpaved) to an unmarked footpath. There is a quarter-mile walk to a canyon overlook.

Five miles farther southeast at Swan Falls Dam, a rutted dirt road follows the river for some 10 miles. Anywhere along the road is good for raptor watching.

No hunting or shooting is allowed in the BPNA. However, that has not prevented gun toting persons who could not resist the bird or rodent target from entering the area. Bullet holes riddle the no shooting sign posted at the entrance.

The migratory Bird Treaty Act levels a maximum fine of $500 and up to six months in jail for killing a hawk, but catching the culprit is a problem.

The BPNA is an ideal habitat for the densest population of raptors known in the world, but can the area survive harmful encroachment by man?

gossip column

By ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN

Q: I really can't believe that sensible Oscar winner Louise Fletcher has taken up with a boy nearly half her age. Has anyone seen them together? — G.B., Washington, D.C.

A: We have. We sat right behind Louise, who is 42, and Morgan Mason at a cast party for "The Cheap Detective," which Louise is starring in.

They cuddled, they looked into each other's eyes and even shared a chair during some of the festivities. We'd call that togetherness.

MUSIC BOX ENCOUNTER: Pop artist and actor Art Garfunkel strolled into the Manhattan shop of music box authority Rita Ford a few weeks ago and announced: "Don't pay any attention to me or come near me. If I want help I'll come to you."

What made the encounter so strange was that Mrs. Ford didn't recognize Garfunkel and hadn't the slightest idea who he was. A few minutes later, a mutual friend came into the shop and introduced Garfunkel to Mrs. Ford. Then all three talked about music boxes.

JODY POWELL

WASHINGTON UNDER (THE) COVER: The nation's capital could be rocked by another scandal if a current massage parlor employe decides to tell all. She works at a private club in Alexandria with a top-level Washington clientele, one of whom likes to be led around with a dog leash while another dresses up in a red wig and bra. All we can say—is that she is working on her autobiography.

NO MORE NUDITY: Lorenzo Lamas, the 20-year-old son-of-Arlene Dahl and Fernando Lamas, decided that posing nude for a sex magazine would give his acting career a lift. He didn't reckon with the ire of his Mom and Dad who managed to have the show-all photographs suppressed.

Lamas, with his clothes back on, will now launch his career in a more conservative fashion with a major role in the movie version of "Grease."

Q: How come you don't notice Peter Falk's glass eye in photographs, movies or on TV? — E.P., Providence, RI.

A: the main reason you don't notice is that Falk has taught himself a number of mannerisms that camouflage the problem. He also has written into his contract that he must O.K. all photographs of himself.

Even more extraordinary, he's contractually permitted to see all the film shot each day and kill footage in which his eyes do not look quite right.

Q: When are we going to see Liz Taylor in a movie? We keep reading that she's making them but are we right that the last two haven't even been released yet? — W.W., Manhattan.

A: Alas, you're right. "A Little Night Music" still has not gone into national release and Liz's last effort, "Winter Kills," is still without a distributor. But movie insiders say that Liz, playing a procurer for a Kennedy-like figure in "Winter Kills," does a marvelous job.

GARBO SPOKE: Manahattan florist Robert Christatos, who has known Greta Garbo casually for 25 years, saw her gazing into his shop window the other day. He came out to say hello but Garbo started to dart up Madison Avenue.

Christatos asked her to wait for a moment and she did. He went inside his shop and got her a bouquet of roses. "Thank you for waiting," he said. "You're welcome," said Garbo and, clutching the flowers, she dashed away.

THE EXPERT: How do the serious beer drinkers like their favorite beverage served? Well, those in the know in Washington say the world's greatest expert on beer drinking currently has to be White House press secretary Jody Powell. Jody produces from his refrigerator glass mugs that have been cooled with the beer in them at a temperature of 10 degrees Fahrenheit. That's how he and the other experts do it, explains Jody, and our source on the scene says it's good indeed.

Q: Your item about that great director David Lean coming out of retirement to do his own version of "Mutiny on the Bounty" was fascinating. Who will play Fletcher Christian and Captain Bligh? — E.K., Raleigh, N.C.

A: Lean, who has been living in the South Pacific, wants his neighbor Marlon Brando for the movie. Brando played Fletcher Christian 15 years ago in "Mutiny," a dismal and expensive flop. But Lean wants Brando to play Captain Bligh, the late Charles Laughton role, this time around.

These days, Marlon likes to get a seven figure fee for two or three weeks work but with a meticulous perfectionist like Lean there's no such thing as a quick job. Brando might be tempted since the film would be shot in Tahiti, close to his island hideaway.

NOT SO SHINY: Nothing but trouble with the stage musical "Shine It On." Rumors are that star Liza Minnelli will be replaced by Shirley MacLaine, for whom the show was originally written. More rumors that director Martin Scorsese will be replaced. And then still more rumors that Liza says she'll quit if Scorsese is replaced. And Scorsese is reported to have warned he'll quit if Liza is replaced.

HEARTS AND FLOWERS: We hear Barbara Walters has herself a new man. He's Dr. Sidney Harman, under secretary of commerce and a wealthy Long Island industrialist. Barbara actually met Harman three years ago but at that time he was involved with someone she knew. Sidney used to date TV's Sue Cott until she dropped him. He's been telling friends for years that he wants to get married. Well, it's too soon to get excited yet.

Q: Do you think that Shelley Duvall will really give up her promising film career just to stay close to singer Paul Simon? — C.T., Santa Monica, Calif.

A: Love was about to conquer all but then Shelley got an offer she couldn't refuse. She's going to London to star with Jack Nicholson in the next Stanley Kubrick opus, "The Shining." That's an assignment any actress would do just about anything for.

TALENT SEARCH: CBS is hunting for a big movie star who has never done television before, to star in the $6 million production of "The Dain Curse." This is the only still unproduced Dashiell Hammett novel. It's owned by Lillian Hellman and is from the late author's estate.

The multi-million dollar TV film will start shooting in San Francisco this October. So far, the network hasn't come up with a real super star.

ROYAL SECRET: Prince Philip has a great reputation for telling dirty jokes and you might wonder if these upset Queen Elizabeth. Surprisingly not. A member of the Canadian press corps, who has covered the Royal family, tells us that the Queen is not stodgy and likes the bawdy jokes. Prince Philip tells her the latest ones in private.

Q: Can you tell me why dark-haired John Travolta always seems so pale and never is tan? Is he allergic to the sun? — C.G., Temple City, Calif.

A: Travolta, like Marilyn Monroe, Jean Harlow, and even Paul Newman, has that rare translucent skin quality considered an asset in TV and movies. It's called "flesh impact." While Travolta stays out of the sun, he's not allergic to it, though he's very fair despite his dark hair.

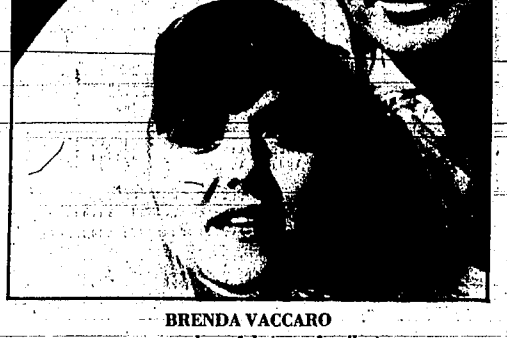

His eyebrows, for example, are so light they have to be dyed to match his hair; otherwise, Travolta's blue eyes would be lost in his pale face when being photographed.

DIET DILEMMA: Publisher Lyle Stuart was so impressed with the results he got from Dr. Robert Linn's protein supplement that Stuart himself wrote the foreword when he published Linn's book, "The Last Chance Diet."

Stuart managed to drop 90 pounds by sticking to the diet, but unfortunately, by the time the book went back for another printing, the publisher had regained all the weight he lost. In the new edition, there is no longer a foreword by the now plump Mr. Stuart.

BRENDA'S WEDDING: What hasn't been publicized about Brenda Vaccaro's marriage is that her new husband, William Spencer Bishop, comes from a multi-million-dollar automotive family.

Q: What can you tell me about Esther Williams? Is she still alive and if so, does she still swim professionally? — R.S., Marion, Ind.

BRENDA VACCARO

GRETA GARBO
. . . after flowers, she spoke

A: Esther Williams is alive and well and living in Los Angeles but not swimming professionally anymore. She's a frequent guest at Hollywood parties and looked wonderful at a recent bash given by producer Ray Stark.

Youngster joins 'Chico and the Man'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The death of Freddie Prinze last January posed a number of moral, economic and human problems for producer James Komack, not the least of which was whether to continue the "Chico and the Man" series.

Komack and Prinze were close personal friends and the emotional trauma made any decision for the producer difficult.

Komack, who also produces "Welcome Back, Kotter," and two new fall entries, "Sugar Time!" and "Another Day," conferred with Jack Albertson who starred with Prinze in the "Chico" series.

Their first reaction was to discontinue the show. Albertson was as emotionally wrought as his producer.

Then the NBC network, Komack and Albertson began hearing from the public.

"Viewer reaction was overwhelming," Komack said. "They pleaded with us to continue the show.

"A month after Freddie's death Jack and I met again to weigh the possibilities of going on. We decided if we stopped the show we'd be wallowing in an emotional vacuum for a long, long time.

"But how to continue? It would be impossible, of course, to replace Freddie.

"I reminded myself that I'd always had in my mind bringing in a young kid, a sidekick for Freddie who could also play off a lot of humor with Jack. So we began a search for a Spanish-American youngster."

Komack has a way with child performers, working well with 6-year-old Brandon Cruz in "The Courtship of Eddie's Father" for several seasons.

Finding the right youngster for the new role was more difficult than expected.

Komack's casting office, headed by Joyce Selznick, went through regular channels and came up blank. She interviewed 300 Hispanic youngsters. Komack talked to 50 of them without success.

They tapped the New York pool of kid actors, again unable to find just the youngster they were looking for.

"We exhausted all the talent agencies on both coasts," Komack said. "Then our people began haunting schools here in Los Angeles staring at kids who might be right. We even interviewed kids in the boxing clubs around here.

"Joyce asked herself where one might logically find a bright and attractive Mexican-American child. One Sunday she went to Olvera Street, the famous tourist attraction in Los Angeles.

"Sure enough, she found what we were looking for. He was playing the marimba with his brothers' musical group beside a corn stand operated by his mother. He was the youngest and collected coins from the crowd."

Gabriel Melgar, 12, sat beside Komack, his bright brown eyes gleaming with interest.

He's a lively youngster with a mop of long, dark hair and soft, attractive Spanish-accented English.

"Sometimes we played just for fun," he said. "And sometimes we collected a lot of money on Saturday and Sunday. But I didn't want to go to the studio because I thought they wanted me to do a commercial."

Komack explained that Gabriel had been approached many times to be interviewed for TV commercials.

"They'd sit him in a room with a bunch of other kids," Komack said. "He never got the job and missed a day of school to boot. He loves school and disliked the casting calls. Finally he refused to go at all.

"Joyce managed to bring Gabriel in with three other kids. The first one was a little too soft. The second one came on a little strong. Then she introduced Gabriel. I looked, listened and said, 'That's the one.'

"I tested all three boys two days later. Gabriel never missed a line and he has a natural flair for comedy. He's marvellous."

Young Gabriel wriggled with pleasure and embarrassment. "Mr. Albertson is a nice man," he said. "So is Scatman Carruthers. They make me laugh.

"I like this work, too. I still like to sing and play the marimba, but we don't play at Olvera Street anymore."

Youngest in a family of three sisters and four brothers, Gabriel was born in Tijuana, Mexico. The Melgars are Mexican citizens with U.S. resident status. The Melgar Brothers Marimba Band, under the direction of Gabriel's father, plays gigs in Las Vegas and Disneyland.

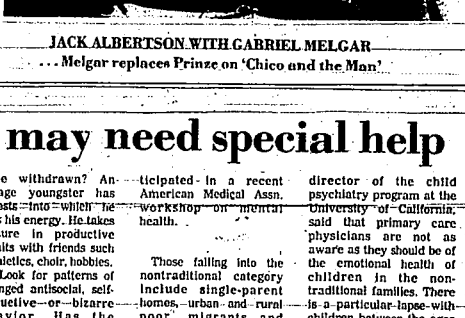

"My mother and father don't speak English very well," Gabriel said, mischief glinting in his eyes. "We speak Spanish at home. Mother says, 'Speak English. Speak English.' But I don't want Mom to speak English. She can't understand what we kids talk about. And sometimes that's good."

Komack grinned at the boy and said, "Gabriel is capable of erasing the grief of Freddie's loss. He is so vital and talented you think of life, not death.

"Life goes on and Gabriel represents that feeling."

At the end of the first show, Gabriel rebels when Albertson calls him "Chico." The child says "My name is Raoul!"

Then in a gruff voice filled with affection, Albertson says, "By me all you kids are called Chico."

Teenagers with problems may need special help

By BARBARA VARRO
© Chicago Sun-Times

You are at your wit's end about your teen-ager who is behaving in a way that you think is peculiar. How can you tell whether he or she is merely going through a phase or is disturbed and needs help?

Dr. Mark J. Blotcky of the Timberlawn Psychiatric Hospital in Dallas maintains that only a minority of adolescents develop symptoms that require psychiatric treatment. But he urges parents and family doctors to look for signs that indicate serious problems that require professional help.

Major points to be considered in assessing a youngster:

— How does the youngster relate to family members and how does he function within the family? Are there ongoing fights and distance between him and one or both parents? Do arguments with parents lead to excessive withdrawal and a smoldering fire? Are there particular stresses in the family? If so, it will be necessary to sort out family disturbance as well as individual problems.

— Are peer relationships inadequate? Does the youngster have difficulty making friends so he is isolated and lonely and keeps to himself? By adolescence, a normal youngster has developed the capacity for solid friendships. Ask the youngster to describe his best friend. The average adolescent is able to describe his friend's personality in depth including his likes and dislikes. A disturbed youngster's description of his friend is generally flat and one-dimensional.

— What is his conduct in school? Examination of his grades may uncover conflicts. Do teachers like him? Has he been truant? Is he interested in extracurricular activities or is he withdrawn? An average youngster has interests into which he pours his energy. He takes pleasure in productive pursuits with friends such as athletics, choir, hobbies.

— Look for patterns of prolonged antisocial, self-destructive or bizarre behavior. Has the youngster destroyed property or assaulted anyone? Is he using drugs or promiscuous? Is he in the habit of running away from home?

MENTAL HEALTH: The children of nontraditional families are ill more often than those belonging to traditional family units, say doctors who participated in a recent American Medical Assn. workshop on mental health.

Those falling into the nontraditional category include single-parent homes, urban and rural poor, migrants and displaced immigrants. According to Dr. Henry Work, director of the American Psychiatric Assn., inadquate prenatal care, overcrowding, poverty and lack of access to health care conribute to the poor mental and physical health of children in those families.

Dr. George Tarjan, director of the child psychiatry program at the University of California, said that primary care physicians are not as aware as they should be of the emotional health of children in the nontraditional families. There is a particular lapse with children between the ages of 2 and 6, which is the period between the time they leave the baby clinics and enter school. To call doctors' attention to the problem, a pamphlet of the proceedings at the workshop will be made available or distributed to primary-care physicians.

National PTA may boycott violent TV shows

CHICAGO—The national president of the PTA says the group may boycott violent television programs and sponsors, but denies that such action would be a form of censorship.

"I think it's vastly different," Grace Baisinger, president of the National Parent-Teacher Assn., said last week. "Every citizen in this country has a right to express his or her opinion. The broadcasters have told us that they have never heard from people. We are only responding to what they have said to us for many years."

Mrs. Baisinger and other PTA officials were here to conduct training seminars at the Conrad Hilton Hotel for members who will monitor fall network programs for excessive violence.

Mena Boulanger, a national trainer for the PTA, quoted from the preamble to the code of the National Assn. of Broadcasters: "The viewer also has a responsibility to help broadcasters serve the public. All viewers should make their criticisms and positive suggestions about programming and advertising known to the broadcast licensee."

Mrs. Baisinger said that any boycotts would come as a last resort after the monitoring and possible challenges to local television stations.
